Cleanup plan changes for Montana Pole Plant

By Robin Jordan

A state agency is making changes to its cleanup plan for polluted soil and groundwater at the Montana Pole and Treating Plant because work done over the last 20 years has only been partially successful, Butte-Silver Bow commissioner learned last week.

Dave Bowers, Project Manager for the Montana Department of Environmental Quality, gave a presentation to the council of commissioners last week on the findings of the latest five-year review of the cleanup project. As a result of that review, he said, the DEQ is proposing a number of changes to its plans to better protect human health and the environment.

The Montana Pole and Treating Plant, located just west of town near the Interstate Highway, operated in Butte from 1946 to 1984, treating wood for industrial uses. Wood products were treated there with a mixture of pentachlorophenol (PCP) and petroleum oil. In 1983, the DEQ responded to a complaint that an oily substance was seeping into Silver Bow Creek.

The agency found PCP, petroleum and dioxin contamination in the creek as well as in surrounding soil and groundwater. PCP and dioxins are known to cause cancer.

In 1985, the EPA led an emergency cleanup. Much of the soil was excavated and a soil treatment area was built on site. A water treatment system was installed to treat the contaminated groundwater.

Under the Superfund process, a Record of Decision was issued in 1993 that identified cleanup requirements for the pole plant. The Record of Decision required more removals and treatment of contaminated soil and construction of a water treatment plant and that cleanup must continue until regulatory levels safe for human health and the environment are achieved.

As part of the superfund process, the DEQ and the EPA are required to complete an assessment of the cleanup performance ever five years—the Five-Year Review Report. The latest report is the fourth since the cleanup began.

Bowers said five-year reviews evaluate how well the cleanup is working, inform the public on the progress of the cleanup and identify needed modifications based on evolving science.

This year's review found that while cleanup levels in the land treatment unit for PCP and petroleum have been met, dioxins are not breaking down as intended. The review also found that the Record of Decision did not have a cleanup standard for protecting groundwater, so an assessment has begun to determine if the current cleanup levels for PCP, petroleum and dioxin are adequate to protect groundwater.

Because of these findings, the DEQ is working on changes to the Record of Decision, including new cleanup levels and approaches. The biggest change is that treated contaminated soils will now be contained under a lined, protective cap. The cap will eliminate exposure to unacceptable dioxin levels in the soil and prevent moisture from reaching the treated contaminated soils.

As part of treatment, the DEQ has moved more than 200,000 cubic yards of polluted soil through the Land Treatment Unit. Now, the agency is preparing to return the soil to excavated areas, which will be capped. The plan under the Record of Decision was to install a conventional soil cap. The new plan calls for an engineered cap that includes a waterproof barrier between contaminated treated soil and covering soil and topsoil, which will be planted with vegetation to further prevent water from reaching the contaminated soil.

The goal, Bowers said, is to return the land to a level suitable for recreational use, such as for a park. At that level, he said, human exposure would be limited to occasional use, as opposed to a stricter industrial standard for land where people working there would be exposed daily. Restrictions on uses of the land would be strictly spelled out in deeds for the property, he said. If the land is to be further cleaned to an industrial standard, the cost and responsibility for the cleanup would fall to the new owner.

The DEQ anticipates having the land ready to hand over ownership in 2019. Butte-Silver Bow has right of first refusal for the property.

At one point, county officials had considered the pole plant area as a possible site for relocation of the county's shops, but county commissioners nixed the idea over concern about polluted soil on the property.

It seems like more than ever, people are sticking to their colors, digging in and holding strong to the beliefs they were force fed as children.

They will argue online and face to face to defend their stance, right or wrong. As comedian Bill Burr says, they go to imright.com and find any nuggets of fact to back up their stance.

They start with conclusion and work backward to justify that end.

We will look back on these times years from now, and wouldn't it be nice to know that you were on the right side of history?

Of course, I'm referring to the suspension of Ezekiel Elliott.

The Dallas Cowboys superstar running back was suspended for 6 games following his unbeliev-

BUTTE SPORTS

Make sure to be on the right side of history able rookie season in the NFL. The league disciplined the running back because Commissioner Roger Goodell believes he is guilty of domestic violence.

That has sent many Cowboys fans into such a tizzy that they now find themselves standing on the side of someone who more than likely – and on multiple occasions – hit a woman.

Granted, the City Attorney's Office in Columbus, Ohio, decided there was not enough proof to press charges on the recent Ohio State football star.

That, along with the fact that the alleged victim has not been the most trustworthy witness, is enough for Cowboys fans – or, more likely, fantasy football geeks – to decry the NFL and the commissioner for handing down the suspension.

You will have to excuse us if we take the findings of the City Attorney's Office in a crazed football town with a grain of salt.

Remember when law enforcement in Tallahassee kind of sort of pretended to investigate a rape allegation involving Florida State quarterback Jameis Winston before deciding that charging a Heisman Trophy candidate with rape is a fast way to lose an election?

The alleged victim in that case, by the way, had way more credibility than the quarterback she accused. Even after the accusation, Winston was suspended for verbally assaulting a woman in the school's cafeteria.

Oh, yeah, there's also that whole stealing crab legs incident too.

The Winston case was not a date rape allegation, either. It was the kind of jump-out-of-the-bushes attack that is in the back of the mind of so many women as they walk down the street alone.

It's scary stuff, but it was not nearly frightening enough to stop Florida State fans – and then Tampa Bay Buccaneers and fantasy fans – from cheering on Winston.

The same goes for Elliott, whose alleged domestic battery was made public long before he gained his first NFL yard.

As long as you stand for the national anthem and you average more than 4 yards per carry, fans will not care if a player commits a murder. Or a double murder as was alleged in the case of former Baltimore Ravens linebacker and ESPN mouthpiece Ray Lewis.

At the risk of beating a dead horse, Lewis was arrested for a double murder. The police and the prosecutors believed he was guilty.

Lewis, though, had money, while his co-defendants did not. So, Lewis cut a deal, pled guilty to obstruction of justice and testified against his buddies while, according to some reports, funding their defense.

The jury then acquitted Lewis' buddies because the linebacker was not a credible witness.

Ravens fans then cheered as Lewis helped lead Baltimore to a pair of Super Bowl titles. Right Guard paid him to do commercials, and he was put on the cover of the Madden video game multiple times.

So, even though they have had way more despicable characters to cheer for under Hall of Famer Jerry Jones, Cowboys fans are hardly alone when it comes to cheering for villains.

(On a side note, "Shoeless" Joe Jackson and Roger Maris are still not in the Hall of Fame, but Jerry Jones is. Sure, they are different Halls of Fame, but still.)

Steelers fans have practically worshiped Ben Roethlisberger because the quarterback delivered Super Bowl rings to the Steel City. He also reached civil settlements with a pair of women who accused him of sexual assault.

In the case of Elliott, the NFL, probably overcompensating for the way it handled Ray Rice punching his fiancé three years ago, apparently investigated the case a lot more thoroughly than the prosecution attorneys.

Maybe he didn't do it. Yeah, and maybe O.J. Simpson really was framed.

You know who never gets accused of hitting women? Guys who never hit women.

While it too often goes unpunished, hitting a woman is one of the lowest things a man can do. It is something that society should never take lightly, no matter how many yards the offender put up as a rookie.

That's why it is so sad to see that the only outrage in the Elliott case is because and not why he was suspended.

Nobody should ever cheer for Ezekiel Elliott.

When he returns from suspension (or plays while appealing it), fans should boo him like the old lady on The Princess Bride. Every week he should be heckled with the venom usually reserved for guys who, allegedly, let a hair of air out of a football.

He should be ridiculed and mocked like he refused to stand for the national anthem.

As we learned in the case of Colin Kaepernick, fans can influence teams. Right or wrong, no team will touch Kaepernick because he protested by sitting, then kneeling during the Star Spangled Banner.

Even though players are protesting long after Kaepernick was blackballed, Kaepernick has been Dixie Chicked. Smart money is that Kaepernick never takes another NFL snap.

So, shaming works. Boycotting works. Burning jerseys works.

Now that we know that, it is time to bring that approach to guys who beat women and guys who have to pay settlements to silence sexual assault allegations.

Burn those No. 7 Steelers jerseys. Shred those No. 21 Cowboys shirts. Stop cheering for Jameis Winston's fantasy points.

Make sure that when it comes to athletes beating women that you can look back and tell your grandkids that you stood on the right side of history.

On this issue, that should be a pretty easy call.

Butte Relay for Life seeks teams

American Cancer Society is calling on all community members to participate in the annual Relay For Life of Butte Silver Bow on September 16th at The Butte Plaza Mall (Stage). The Relay For Life movement is the world's largest fundraising event to save lives from cancer. Uniting communities across the globe, the event celebrates people who have battled cancer, remember loved ones lost, and take action for lifesaving change.

During Relay For Life events, members of each team take turns walking around the track/path. Teams participate in fundraising leading up to the event. Relay For Life brings the community embracing their collective power to free the world from the pain and suffering of cancer.

"Every passionate step taken demonstrates courage and strength," said Jenean Kujawa, Event Co-Chair. "Together, we are bigger than cancer, and funds raised by local teams help the American Cancer Society bring cancer to its knees."

Funds raised help the American Cancer Society provide free information and support for people facing the disease today, and fund cancer research that will help protect future generations.

Teams and individuals can learn more and sign up for the Relay For Life event by visiting www.RelayForLife.org/buttemt or for event information call Jenean Kujawa at 496-5591.

St. James Healthcare and BSB Health Department Release the 2017 Community Health Needs Assessment

St. James Healthcare and Butte-Silver Bow Health Department today released the 2017 Community Health Needs Assessment (CHNA) for Butte-Silver Bow. The document is the result of work that began in late 2016.

St. James and the BSB Health Department contracted with Professional Research Consultants, Inc. (PRC) to conduct telephone surveys with 400 residents selected at random within the community and to conduct an online Key Informant survey with key leaders, social service agencies, and physicians in Butte. PRC analyzed all the data gathered, compared it to state and national benchmarks and also to Healthy People 2020 objectives, and then drafted a preliminary assessment document.

In late June, all the online survey participants were invited to a meeting to evaluate, discuss and prioritize the health issues identified through the surveys. Most of Butte's social service agencies were represented and with the information gathered at this meeting, PRC finalized the 2017 Community Health Needs Assessment.

Prioritized on scope and severity as well as ability to impact, the top four areas identified are:

- Substance Abuse
- Mental Health
- Nutrition/Physical Activity/Weight
- Injury/Violence

"This is a great way to really understand the health needs in our community," said Jay Doyle, Interim President at St. James Healthcare. "As the only acute care facility in the region, St. James must ensure it is meeting the needs of the communities it serves and this assessment helps us determine exactly what our focus should be."

Karen Sullivan, Director of the Butte Silver Bow Health Department, said, "The information provided by this assessment is invaluable in helping my department establish priorities. Because PRC also conducted our 2014 assessment, we are now able to compare this year's data with the data from 2014 and that helps us assess the impact our programs have on the community's health.

The next step in the process is to develop a Community Health Improvement Plan that outlines actions that will be taken over the next three years to improve the health of the community.

The complete 2017 Community Health Needs Assessment Report is available online at www.sjh-mt.org/about/community-benefit or at <http://co.silverbow.mt.us/> or <http://co.silverbow.mt.us/135/Health>.

Conducted every three years, the assessment evaluates the overall health status of Butte-Silver Bow, identifies the most pressing health-related needs of the community, and helps St. James, the Health Department, and other community participants determine how to resolve some of those needs.

Car project finally finished

By Robin Jordan

Our family is proud to have my grandfather's 1962 Chevy Impala, a beautiful white beast of a car that Grandpa Bill bought new in Polson many long years ago. My late grandfather cared for the car meticulously, keeping it in his garage except for errands and the occasional trip with my Grandma Ida to visit us in Butte or to take the family for a ride to Kalispell for shopping and dinner when we visited in the summer.

After my brother died in 2002, my husband Dave took over caring for the car and he and I have had the pleasure of taking it for many a summer drive. While Dave has had to take care of a few mechanical problems, such as replacing the fuel pump last summer, the car runs great. The body is in its original condition and even the original upholstery is in great shape.

However, the car has had a major dent in the front bumper. No one remembers whether Grandpa dented it before he finally gave up driving and turned the car keys over or whether it was dented later. At any rate, it has bothered my husband for years, so this summer, he found a company that manufactures new parts for old Chevrolets and ordered a new one online. The company promised that replacing the bumper would be a simple job: no major tools required, just bolt it in place.

The bumper arrived and it looked great—straight and shiny as advertised. Taking the old bumper off was relatively simple. The original bumper was made up of three pieces and the new one was a single piece, but it looked like a fairly straightforward job to put on the new one.

Oh, but this was not to be the case. The bumper wraps around the front of the car and has two bolts inside that have to fit into brackets on either side. In order to accomplish this, Dave had to loosen those brackets on one side and take off two other large supports under the front of the bumper to make it fit.

After getting the bolts into place on both sides, we tried bolting the bumper to the brackets we had left in place. However, when we tried to reattach the center supports, they wouldn't fit under the bumper correctly. So, we had to unbolt the bumper from the brackets on the first side and loosen the brackets.

Starting at the center, Dave put the two large supports back under the front of the bumper and bolted the bumper to them. This was one of those knuckle-busting jobs under the car where Dave had to reach underneath a steel plate to bolt the bumper to the supports, doing most of the work blind and upside down.

Next came the problem of bolting the bumper to the loosened brackets on both sides and tightening the brackets. At this point, we realized the bumper had to bend for all the holes to line up. Dave worked valiantly on the task, but after hours of work, the holes in the bumper remained a few centimeters away from the holes in the brackets.

At this point, Dave had a brainstorm. Luckily, he had a block-and-tackle, so we rigged a strap under one rear tire and used the block and tackle—and a large block of wood—to pull the bumper backward on one side so that the holes lined up with the brackets.

Of course, when we looked at the other side, we had the same problem, but he used the same solution and finally, the shiny new bumper was in place.

The whole process ended up taking more than a week, but we're thrilled with the results.

The project just serves to remind us that we should always take advertisements that say assembly is easy and just requires a few tools with a grain of salt. Or, in this case, a whole lot of salt.

The Koch Brothers' Tax Reform

By George Waring

Ten weeks ago, long before the White House staged its tax reform introduction at the Newseum in DC, Axios' Jonathan Swan wrote that the Koch Brothers' network of dark money groups were going to be funding a national public relations campaign to convince us that Trump's tax reform would save us from paying federal income taxes. Swan predicted that we should expect: "Digital ads, grassroots organizing and likely a TV advertising campaign that would rally the American public behind the need for a radical overhaul of the tax code."

The two Koch Brothers' groups leading the tax campaign were also behind the six-year Republican Party effort to "Repeal and Replace Obamacare," "Americans For Prosperity" and "Freedom Partners." Although the Kochs had not supported Trump's candidacy, their organizations are now the source of his tax reform principles, the principles heralded on July 31st by Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin and Mark Short, Trump's legislative director, a former "Freedom Partners" national director.

According to Swan, we'll be bombarded on television and on internet ads with five simple selling points.

Six weeks after Swan's report, The Washington Times' David Sherfinski reported that the Koch Brothers "Americans for Prosperity" group had expanded its initial digital ad campaign backing Trump tax reform to target a dozen Senate Republicans. Until then, the Kochs' focus had been on enlisting the support of Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee, the elite group charged with writing the new tax reform laws. The themes in these Koch ads urged members of Congress to adopt "a set of fundamental principles—to make the tax code fairer and flatter without adding new burdens or special breaks." Thus, creating a simpler tax code with lower tax rates.

On July 31st, Bloomberg's John McCormick credited the two Koch groups with all the charitable funding of the big Washington, DC events that commenced their public Federal tax reform campaign. They hosted Secretary Mnuchin and Legislative Director Short at a panel discussion on the Trump-Koch plan at the Newseum. Two days later, they funded the charitable stipend given House "Freedom Caucus" Chairman, Representative Mark Meadows, Republican from North Carolina, for speaking in favor of Koch-Trump tax reform at a free gala gourmet luncheon for major business leaders.

By the end of July, the Koch Brothers' efforts had been joined by the Club for Growth, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and the Business Roundtable. The last, composed of CEOs of our largest corporations, announced the launching of a "multimillion-dollar" campaign, including "national cable ads and radio spots on 250 stations across the country."

As McCormick explained, the widespread support for the Koch Brothers' tax reform initiative was the opportunity provided by Trump to achieve "the largest tax cut in history, including a reduction in the 35% corporate tax rate to 15%." The nation's wealthiest individuals expected their top income tax rate would be reduced from 39.6% to 35%. Thus, billions in additional wealth is on the table for the grabbing.

According to Americans for Prosperity, "fifty events are planned at the state level in August and September, ranging from town hall-style meetings to policy discussions to phone banks that will contact voters." By the end of July, the Koch groups had spent close to $2 million for online ads backing tax reform. They plan to spend double that amount during the rest of the year, "eventually including cable or broadcast television ads."

Steve Mnuchin has promised several times over seven months that, despite the first Trump campaign's tax plan's promise of big tax reductions for the wealthy, that is no longer a fact. In a November CNBC interview, Mnuchin stated

Carousel Corner

By Larry Hoffman

Last Thursday marked two years since Larry Schnell and I started digging for the foundations of our Carousel building. It was a long wait from the time the site was finally selected until the final draft of the agreement, approval by the Council of Commissioners, and the building permits were approved. We knew our building time was short, winter would come all too soon, but even more ominous was only being a few weeks away from the start of hunting season. A lot of work in Montana, especially weekend volunteer work, comes to a screeching halt in mid-October.

We really scrambled to get the concrete work done in that small window, but we made it. At least we had a surface to build on and weren't stopped all winter. That's not to say things were easy. There were a lot of cold, wet, blustery days getting the steel framework of the carousel room erected, juggling structural pieces with the crane in the wind, trying to get bolts in place with frozen fingers. We got the wood walls framed and sheathed by the end of the year and started setting the roof trusses on January 2nd, a beautiful, clear, calm Butte morning, at nine below zero.

Progress has been slow, going from conditions being too cold for volunteers all winter and spring, to the summer being too nice. Summer is short and there are many more fun things to do with friends and family than work another day after Friday.

Work is getting done. Bob Foley, Tom Davies, and Ted Bury are nearly finished with the interior wiring, while Ron Kissock and his crew got the heavy work done on the main service and installing outside lights. Jim Ayres, Scott and Sonya Rosenthal, Ed Curran, Randy Clayton, Dan Schlesinger, and Terry Newton worked on the concession area and entrance. The ceiling of the entrance is roughed in and center pole of the mechanism is finally ready to stand.

Our first Gala, last January, was a lot of fun and successfully raised a good chunk of money, so the second one is now in the works, scheduled for next January near the end of the month. The planning committee has some great ideas!

Same old question, almost every day, same old answer. No idea when the horses will be ready to ride. It will happen.

there would be "no absolute tax cut for the upper class." Senator Ron Wyden of Oregon held Mnuchin to that promise during his confirmation hearing. Wyden called this promise made to Congress his "Mnuchin Rule."

When Mnuchin participated in a Peter G. Peterson Foundation event in May, he said it was the Trump administration's "intent" to give a middle-income tax cut. He said nothing about upper-income tax reductions. Moderator John Harwood of CNBC asked "if it'd be fair to say that the administration's intent would then be a middle-income tax cut and a zero-tax cut for people at the top."

Mnuchin's response: "The president's priority has been not cutting taxes for the high end. His priority is about creating a middle-income tax cut."

So, why are the Koch Brothers so generous? So public-minded? So altruistic? So happy?

Butte Local Development Corporation names new Executive Director

The Butte Local Development Corporation (BLDC) is pleased to announce the appointment of Joe Willauer as its new Executive Director, replacing Pam Haxby-Cote who was recently named Director of the Montana Department of Commerce. The BLDC Board of Directors' decision comes with the fullest confidence that Willauer will continue to be an excellent steward of the BLDC's mission and a passionate leader for the Butte community. The BLDC recognizes Willauer as a leader who, with his years of experience in economic development and job creation, is the right person to further advance the Butte economy through growing entrepreneurship and employment opportunities, increasing population and tax base, and assisting our existing businesses to grow and compete in a global economy.

Before joining the BLDC, Willauer served as the Food and Agriculture Development Center Director and then as the Executive Director at Headwaters RC&D, serving the seven county region of Southwest Montana. Additionally, Willauer founded Butte Young Professionals, a volunteer organization with a mission of supporting and recruiting young professionals to Butte. Willauer has been very active in local and state community activities, serving on many commissions including the Governor-appointed Future Fisheries Review Panel and Montana Ambassadors. Willauer received his Master's degree in Urban and Regional Planning from Eastern Washington University and is a Certified Economic Development Finance Professional.

According to Ray Rogers, President of the BLDC Board of Directors, "We are incredibly excited to have Joe Willauer as the BLDC's new Executive Director. Joe has an excellent background in economic development and is very well respected among his peers across the State of Montana. Joe understands the unique challenges facing Butte Silver Bow and our region, has outstanding passion and vision for economic development, and we look forward to working with Joe to make a positive impact on job creation and economic development for Butte."

Willauer is scheduled to start effective Tuesday, September 5th.

Stay Calm on the Investment "Roller Coaster"

Unless you live near an amusement park that does a lot of advertising, you probably didn't know that Aug. 16 is National Roller Coaster Day. Actual roller coasters provide people with thrills. But as an investor, how can you stay calm on the "roller coaster" of the financial markets?

Here are some suggestions:

Know what's in front of you. If you've ever ridden a roller coaster in the dark, you may find it scarier than if you boarded it in daylight – after all, it can be unsettling not to know where you're going. The same can be said about investing: If you have no idea what's in front of you, you might find the journey unnerving – and if that happens, you could make panicky decisions, which are usually bad ones. So prepare for the inevitable market volatility – it's a normal part of the investment landscape.

Buckle up. When you're on a roller coaster, you need to buckle your seat belt or use a restraint. You want to have the excitement of the ride, but you certainly don't want to take unnecessary risks. And you can enjoy some of the excitement of investing without incurring more risk than you are comfortable with, too. One way to lower your risk level is to diversify across a range of investments – stocks, bonds, government securities, and so on. That way, if a market downturn primarily affects just one type of investment, you'll have some protection. However, although diversification can reduce the impact of volatility on your portfolio, it can't protect against all losses or guarantee a profit.

Choose a strategy for the journey. Different people have different ways of handling a roller coaster ride. Some like to throw their hands up, enjoying the feeling of abandon, while others hold on tightly to the bar in front of them. When you invest, you also need a strategy that works for you, and the best one may be the simplest: Buy quality investments and hold them for the long term. How long is "long term"? It could be 10, 20, 30 years or more. Famed investor Warren Buffet says his favorite holding period is "forever." If you've chosen a mix of quality investments appropriate for your risk tolerance, you may be able to hold them until either your goals change or the investments themselves undergo some transformation.

Stay for the whole "ride." When you hop on a roller coaster, you've got no choice – you're staying until the ride is over. As an investor, though, you can exit the investment world whenever you like. But if you take a "time out" from investing every time the market drops, you risk still being out of the market when it rallies – and the early stages of a rally are often when the biggest gains occur. Furthermore, if you keep investing during a "down" market, you'll be buying shares when their price has dropped, which means your dollars can go further – and you'll be following one of the basic rules of investing: "Buy low."

You can't take out all the twists and turns of the investment road, but by following the above suggestions, you can help make the ride less stressful – and possibly more rewarding.

What's in Your Gut?

My partner in our Lifestyle Class, Ida Reighard, who is a Diabetes Educator and Nurse, went to a National Conference on Diabetes and shared some of the slides with me. I was particularly fascinated by those that talk about how the flora in our intestines affects not only our health, but also our susceptibility to Diabetes, other diseases and many other aspects of our health.

Diets high in fat, sugar and processed foods, together with the use of antibiotics, change the flora in our guts for the worse. Lifestyle choices, particularly exercise, also have influence, and it is not surprising that the good choices are the ones that keep healthy. Negative influences include smoking, pollution, stress and some medications. We still have societies where the diet is more basic and closer to nature. The people living in these more primitive environments where they are not as clean as ours have better flora.

The flora is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients, synthesizing vitamins and amino acids, regulating the immune system and even regulating our mood and behavior. The five things we can control that are most beneficial are: Prebiotics, Probiotics, Nutrition, Exercise, and Stress Management. The same nutrition guidelines we discuss regularly in this column benefits flora. The experts suggest more fiber, eating more fruits and vegetables and less fatty and sugary foods, while staying as unprocessed as possible. The same is also true for gradually increasing exercise and managing stress, subjects we also discuss in this column.

Prebiotics are not digested in the small intestine and are fermented by the flora. They encourage the growth of probiotics. This enhances the absorption of calcium, magnesium and iron. Since I was not familiar with prebiotics prior to reading about this, I will list some that are common and you will recognize. Leeks, onion, garlic, asparagus, whole grains, green bananas, oats, wheat, soybeans, psyllium fiber (Metamucil) are all prebiotics, and one of the best is beans.

Most of us are more familiar with probiotics as they are more in the public eye. I have always tried to eat yogurt, for example, when I have to take an antibiotic, to try to keep my digestion working well. More recently, I have been making my own kombucha (a fermented tea drink) which is teeming with probiotics. It has been available in bottles for a few years, but I found out at the grocery store today that Stokes in Butte and Anaconda now have it on tap and there are several size choices. Other sources of probiotics are sauerkraut, soy sauce, miso, tempeh, sour dough bread and kefir.

There are also probiotic supplements but they vary widely in quality and effectiveness. I would recommend checking with your primary care provider for the best probiotic supplement for if you both feel it would be beneficial to your health. I'm happy with yogurt, kombucha and sour dough bread but people's tastes vary and these are not options for everyone.

To sum it up, healthy flora leads to a healthier you. To make sure yours stays at its best, stick with your exercise program and work on stress management. Take antibiotics only when necessary. Don't be extreme with hygiene - too clean is not healthy for flora. Don't use tobacco and remember to get out and enjoy nature. Stay independent and living out in the community. All these things lead to a more functioning gut and better health.

Diabetes Tidbit

People often times feel what they ate at dinner or bedtime has a direct impact on their blood sugar in the morning. This is not true. The fasting morning BG is controlled mostly by the overnight insulin level. You are probably not making enough insulin at night. This causes sugar to be released by the liver. The "Leaky Liver" puts more sugar in your blood and raises your blood sugar. This is frustrating because you may go to bed with a normal blood sugar, (80-140) and wake up higher and you did not eat all night. Please remember, there is more to diabetes than food.

Pole Plant

The state is also looking to optimizing its water treatment plant to save money. The plant pumps and treats groundwater to remove cancer-causing contaminants left from the pole-treating process and is expected to be needed for at least another 30 years. Bowers said running the plant costs about $900,000 annually. Optimization would also help the plant meet new water quality standards, Bowers said.

Several commissioners expressed dismay that the state plan for the Montana Pole Plant includes leaving waste in place.

Chief Executive Dave Palmer summed up the sentiment at the end of the presentation with a final comment that when the Milltown Dam east of Missoula was removed, the waste was hauled to Opportunity.

"Why can't we do the same thing and haul it to Helena where the decision-makers live?" he asked.

The DEQ plans to hold a number of public meetings to discuss its modified plans and invite public input this fall.

Trico hatch brings plenty of good fly-fishing

By Paul Vang

Remember the month of June? Back when you took a drive along the Big Hole River and you'd see parking lots at Fishing Access Sites full to overflowing? When you could sit on the bank of the river and watch drift boats and rubber rafts floating down the river in an endless parade of anglers, guides, and recreational floaters?

That seems like ancient history right now. The river is mostly deserted, except for the occasional boat floating down river. The crowds are gone.

The crowds may be gone, but the fish are still there and they're hungry.

Back in June, during high water, floating might be the best way to catch trout on a river. It certainly makes a river a lot more accessible, when wading is all but impossible except along the fringes of the shoreline.

Right now, wading anglers have the advantage, and I count myself as primarily a wade angler, even if I have a small pontoon boat for floating the river.

When wading, we may not be able to work miles of river, but we can work our way up a hundred yards of riffle and cast our flies to actively feeding trout and probably have more action than we'd have in a ten-mile float.

Timing is everything, though. The major insect hatch right now is tricos, the tiny mayfly that daily emerges by the millions and comes back to the river in clouds of bugs as it completes its life cycle in that final phase of mating and reproduction. It usually happens sometime around 10 a.m. to noon.

On my most recent outing I approached a run on the lower Big Hole River and fish were rising all along the water's surface. I first thought that it might be mostly whitefish that were causing all the commotion, but on my first cast I hooked a nice brown trout. For the next hour I had continuous action, catching and releasing a dozen fish, about half of which were browns and the rest were whitefish.

Then, after taking a short break to tie a new tippet on my leader, I waded back into the river, but the excitement was over. There were still a few risers but the feeding frenzy was over.

Another great time to be fly-fishing right now is the evening, especially the last hour before sunset.

My favorite fly for evening fly-fishing is the soft-hackle wet fly, an old-fashioned fly brought back to modern favor by an old friend, Sylvester Nemes, the late author of several books on fly-fishing, mostly about soft-hackle flies.

It's the ultimate in easy fishing. You cast the fly across the current of the river and let it drift downstream, swinging across the current. Strikes can happen at any moment in the drift, including when the fly is straight downstream. The fly is mostly in the surface film of the water and if you're watching the chances are you'll see the rise. But, you'll do just as well looking around and daydreaming; when the trout take the fly they'll let you know. They hit hard and often go on long runs across the river.

I often recall a riverside conversation I had with a couple that had been fishing in early evening and were quitting because the trout weren't coming up to their dry flies. I suggested to them that they should try a soft-hackle wet fly, as the action was just about to get hot. They declined the suggestion. "We're dry-fly purists; we like to see the fish rise."

I do, as well, though I've learned over the years that we have a lot more angling action if we're open to more options.

The fish are also open to those different options. One of the fish I caught last weekend during the trico hatch had two flies in its jaw. One, the dry fly I had cast to it, and the other a soft-hackled wet fly that I'd lost the night before when it broke off when I was trying to release it.

This Week In Labor History

August 2nd - August 8th

"American fascism will not be really dangerous until there is a purposeful coalition among the Corporatists, the deliberate poisoners of public information, and those who stand for the K.K.K. type of demagoguery."
-Vice President Henry Wallace, 1944 warning of Fascism in America

Wednesday, Aug 23:

The U.S. Commission on Industrial Relations is formed by Congress, during a period of great labor and social unrest. After 3 years, and hearing witnesses ranging from Wobblies (IWW) to wealthy elite Capitalists, it issued an 11-volume report highly critical of Capitalism. -1912
 Founded by Cesar Chavez and Dolores Huerta, the Farm Workers Organizing Committee (to later become United Farm Workers of America) granted a charter by the AFL-CIO. -1966

Thursday, Aug 24:

The Gatling Gun Company, manufacturers of an early machine gun, writes to Railroad President John W. Garrett during a labor strike, urging their product be purchased to deal with the striking workers around the country. Says the company: "4 or 5 men only are required to operate a gun, and one Gatling gun can clear a street or block and keep it clear". -1877

Poland: Solidarnosc trade Union movement founded in Gdansk. Union Solidarity will ultimately bring down Communism in Poland. -1980

Friday, Aug 25:

Birth of Allan Pinkerton, whose strike-breaking detectives the Pinkertons ("Pinks") gave us the word "fink". In Butte, Montana during labor strikes children would "Brick the Pinks" in defense of their town and for fun. -1819
 President Harry Truman ordered the U.S. Army to seize all the nation's railroads to prevent a General Strike. The railroads were kept under federal control for 2 years. -1950

Saturday, Aug 26:

Fannie Sellins and Joseph Starzeleski are murdered by coal company guards, on a picket line in Brackenridge, Pennsylvania. Sellins was a United Mine Workers of America organizer and Starzeleski was a striking miner. -1919
 The Women's Strike for Equality is staged in cities across the U.S., marking the 50th anniversary of the passage of the 19th amendment, under which women won the right to vote. A key focus of the series of marches and demonstrations was equality in the workplace. -1970

Sunday, Aug 27:

Filipino lettuce cutters and white packing shed workers (AFL) strike the powerful Salinas Valley growers and shippers, demanding Union recognition and improved conditions. -1934

Celebrating the 20th Anniversary of the Civil Rights March on Washington, speakers addressed the original march and the state of civil rights in America to a crowd of 300,000. -1983

Monday, Aug 28:

Big Bill Haywood and 14 other members of the IWW (Industrial Workers of the World) were sentenced to 20 years prison for publicly opposing World War One and the draft. The IWW officially opposed entering a war between Monarchs, Czars, Kaisers and Emperors which only benefited the Capitalists class and killed over 16 million people. -1918
 Martin Luther King, Jr., gave his "I have a dream" speech at the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom. March organizers included Bayard Rustin of the AFL-CIO and UAW President Walter Reuther. -1963

Tuesday, Aug 29:

Canada: Miners in Springhill, Nova Scotia decide to form a Provincial Miners' Association to protect their interests during a strike. -1879
 Emma Tenayuca, a celebrated local labor activist, is scheduled to speak at the San Antonio Municipal Auditorium (the Mayor granted the permit). Falsely accusing Emma of Communism 5,000 stormed the auditorium throwing bricks and rocks. Police managed to get Emma to safety. As part of the attack members of the Ku Klux Klan drove to Mayor Maverick's house and tried to kill him and his family. After the attack Emma was blacklisted in San Antonio, unable to work she was forced to move. Time and time again all Red-Baiters and McCarthyists have proven to be on the wrong side of history and in fact evil doers. -1939

What's Cooking

Matador Salad
 Debbie Sorenen

We received a special delivery produce run from one of my brothers today. Actually, he had been visiting our sister in Belgrade and she loaded him up with garden bounty to drop off as he took the "scenic route to Great Falls, via Butte. Lucky us!

One of the bulging bags disclosed cucumbers galore. It reminded me of growing up. We delighted in adding those seasonal vegetables to dinner and supper menus, especially during the grueling days of haying season. Mom would peel the cucumber green rinds off and score the smooth white sides with a dinner fork before slicing them thin. Adding the signature dressing of vinegar and oil was done with a dash and a flourish. We thought they were the best. If you've never tried them, it's time to see what you've been missing.

I'm also including a special recipe from my friend Sandy Spehar, who is not only a great interior decorator, but a terrific cook as well. I think that you'll find this salad delicious.

Matador Salad

1 large bowl of salad greens. Lots of Romaine, some chopped endive and head lettuce. 1/2 lb. crisp bacon-crumbled and 1/2 c. Parmesan cheese. Prepare dressing.

Dressing

1/2 c. oil
 3 T. fresh lemon juice
 2 tsp. fresh chives, chopped
 salt and pepper to taste

2 T. white wine vinegar
 1 tsp. fresh parsley, chopped
 sprinkle of garlic powder
 1 egg, beaten

Mix above ingredients and shake well in jar, just before serving. Top with croutons if desired.
