Silver Bow Creek fish: Many factors at play in creek health

By Robin Jordan

About 50 residents at a symposium last week held by the Citizens Technical Environmental Committee heard that in the 16 years since fish were first found in remediated stretches of Silver Bow Creek, the variety of species has increased, but fish populations have remained disappointingly low for the most part.

And, while the four experts who gave presentations laid out more information on factors that may be limiting the number of fish, no single cause stands out and solving the problem will be complicated and may involve factors beyond human control.

Joe Griffin, retired, who was a hydrologist for the Montana Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ), gave an overview of the history of the creek and its current Superfund status.

Griffin said it's time to have a conversation about factors that are keeping fish numbers low.

"Is it nutrients? Habitat? Water column metals? Temperature? Metals in the streambed? We don't know. That's why we're opening up discussion," he said.

For more than a century, Griffin said, Silver Bow Creek was an industrial sewer for mining and smelting operations in Butte, becoming a stream that "ran red" at times and was devoid of all life.

Griffin said three major contributors to pollution of the creek prior to Superfund listing were: The historic flood of 1908, which washed huge amounts of contamination downstream into the upper Clark Fork River and polluted the streambed and land where it overflowed the banks, Dewatering of underground mining operations pumped between 7 and 11 cubic feet per second into the creek and Stormwater running over exposed mine dumps carried still more heavy metal contamination into the creek.

Sunday was a fine day to be Irish! Temperatures soared to 40 degrees under mostly sunny skies for the St. Patrick's Day Parade held in Uptown Butte. Photos by Robin Jordan

In 1983, the EPA listed the Silver Bow Creek/ Butte area as one of multiple Superfund sites in the Upper Clark Fork Basin and later designated 23 stream miles along Silver Bow Creek as the Streamside Tailings Operable Unit (SSTOU). The primary remedial actions for this operable unit under a Record of Decision issued by the EPA and DEQ in 1995 were removal of tailings and rebuilding of the stream and floodplain. Griffin said there was no groundwater or stormwater component in the remedy for this unit.

Property tax relief programs available, says BSB assessor

By Robin Jordan

Some local homeowners may be eligible for one or more programs that can reduce their property tax bill, according to Butte-Silver Bow Assessor Dan Fisher.

"The problem is, they may not even realize they're eligible," Fisher said. "A lot of people don't even know these reductions are available."

The Property Tax Assistance Program is income-based and available to applicants of all ages, not just elderly property owners, Fisher said. Depending on income level, homeowners can receive a 30 to 80 percent reduction on their property taxes. The guidelines are on the back of the form, which is available in the Assessor's Office at the courthouse or online at mt.gov

Single homeowners with income of up to $9,084 and married/filing as head of household with income up to $12,112 qualify for an 80 percent reduction. Singles with income between

Butte Central Auction, a Community Event March 29, 2019
Butte Central is hosting their annual auction. Celebrating our 50th anniversary of annual auctions, and we want to celebrate with the whole community. Our auction will feature The Dillion Fiddlers, live and silent auctions, as well as many raffle drawings and games. We will honor long time Butte Central families who have worked on previous auctions, as well as showcase local businesses that have been a staple in the Butte Community. We are inviting everyone from the community to join us and celebrate the history of Butte, as well as 50 years of auction memories for Butte Central! The event will be held on March 29 at the Maroon Activities Center. Doors will open at 5:30 PM and silent auction is set to start at 6:00 PM. Tickets are available at the Butte Central Foundation, Elementary School, and High School offices. Tickets are $15 for one or $25 for two. If you would like more information about this topic, please call Katie Hogart at 406-723-6706, or email khogart@buttecentralfoundation.org

As the year 2003 came to a close, I professed that Colt Anderson was crazy to walk on with the University of Montana football team.

The Butte High senior, I said, should go to Montana Tech, start along side Bulldog teammate Cole Salo and be a star in the Frontier Conference.

That would be better than being a benchwarmer in the Big Sky Conference.

A decade and a half later, I find myself trying to talk Anderson into one more season in the National Football League. Specifically, I would like to see Anderson play for the Oakland Raiders.

The Butte boy would look great in the iconic Silver and Black of the Raiders. Of course, Colt has the fashion sense to know that, too.

He is one of the guys behind UPTOP Clothing. The company is named after a celebration Anderson was known for as he was becoming an All-American with the Montana Grizzlies, and nearly every boy in girl in the state dresses like him.

BUTTE SPORTS

Colt Anderson would look great in Silver and Black

If he joins the Raiders, the new Silver and Black UPTOP line will sell like hotcakes.

The reason I think Colt would look good in Raiders colors has nothing to do with fashion, though. It has to do with Mike Mayock.

Mayock, who had a brief career at safety with the New York Giants, has worked as a draft analyst for the NFL Network, served as a color man for some NFL games, and was part of NBC's coverage of Notre Dame football.

On TV, Mayock has shown that he knows more about evaluating talent for the NFL than 10 Mel Kipers and 100 Tod McShays combined.

Mayock has also long been one of Anderson's biggest fans.

After Colt spent the 2009 season on the practice squad in Minnesota, Mayock called a 2010 preseason Vikings game on the NFL Network.

He repeatedly praised the play of Anderson, saying he belongs on an NFL roster. He praised him so much that you would have thought Mayock was related to Colt.

"He was awesome," Anderson said with a laugh when asked about Mayock during an appearance on KBOW Overtime last Wednesday. "It's kind of funny looking back and how it all transpired. He would pull me up after practice and just kind of give a couple of words of encouragement."

Mayock was right about Anderson, who will again be the special guest for the 6th Annual Cystic Fibrosis Benefit March Madness Calcutta Wednesday night at the Butte Country Club.

The Eagles signed Colt off the Vikings practice squad midway through the 2010 season, and Anderson served as a team captain for Philadelphia during a playoff game.

"After I did get a chance in Philadelphia, (Mayock) was doing the Thursday night games. So I ran into him a couple of times," Anderson said. "He came up to me on pre-game and said, 'I told you. I told you you'd get your chance.'"

On Dec. 31, the Raiders hired Mayock to help rebuild the once-proud franchise. So, you would have to believe that he would be interested a certain safety/special teams ace who sat out the 2018 season after playing nine seasons in the NFL.

Anderson will turn 34 during the 2019 football season. While that is still very young, it is old for a football player.

That is something Anderson, who has suffered a torn ACL, a broken arm (twice) and concussions while playing for the Vikings, Eagles, Colts and Bills, knows all too well.

"Obviously, I miss the game days and I miss the locker room," he said. "I don't miss waking up on Mondays and Tuesdays, barely getting out of bed, struggling to brush my teeth. I don't miss that."

Anderson's journey through the NFL was a great ride. His first regular-season NFL game was a 58-28 Eagles win at Washington on Monday Night Football Nov. 15, 2010. He was awarded a game ball for his debut performance.

His last play was when he broke a couple of ribs while diving to try to intercept a Blake Bortles pass in the fourth quarter of Buffalo's 10-3 playoff loss at Jacksonville on Jan. 7, 2018.

Between those games, Anderson got to be teammates with NFL stars like Brett Favre, Michael Vick and Andrew Luck. He became good friends with Vince Papale, the former Eagle played by Mark Wahlberg in the 2006 movie Invincible.

In January of 2015, Anderson was part of the banged-up Colts team that lost 45-7 in the AFC Championship game because Tom Brady deflated the footballs.

He intercepted a Robert Griffin III pass.

While a practice squad player from the Vikings, Colt picked off a Favre pass, even if the scout team defense wasn't supposed to do that against the Hall of Famer.

"I picked it off and I ran a little bit. I was like, shoot, I was supposed to drop it. Brett came up to me and said, 'Hey, do you want me to sign that ball for you,'" Anderson said, imitating Favre's southern drawl. "I've got to play it cool like I've been here before, I and I said 'No, I'm good.'"

Anderson's career surpassed even his own expectations when he boldly decided to walk on at Montana instead of taking a scholarship at Tech.

"Never in my wildest dreams could I imagine it would end up like it did," he said.

Anderson said he lived that dream because enough people believed in him. When he was thinking about going back and playing for Montana Tech, his teammate Rob Schulte talked him into one more semester and one more spring with the Griz.

Colt had another major supporter in assistant coach Tim Hauck, the brother of Grizzly head coach Bobby Hauck. Tim knew what it took to be a safety, having started for the Griz before playing 13 seasons in the NFL.

As a sophomore, Colt worked his way up from third string to first string safety during the preseason camp. He temporarily lost that job when he made a huge tackle on a running back during practice.

While the defense thought the play was live, head coach Bobby Hauck and the offense did not.

"He came up, yelled at me and said to run. Then he told Tim I got demoted down to second or third team," Colt said of Bobby Hauck, a man and coach Anderson respects tremendously. "It was a really cool experience that Tim after practice went up and told Bobby, from what I understand, that, 'If he's not my starter then I quit.' That was awesome that he had that confidence in me."

Today, Colt has the backs of every kid in town the same way. He and his wife, Keelie, started the Colt Anderson Dream Big Foundation that helps young boys and girls be the best that they can be.

"Anything is possible if you work hard and have a good attitude," is the message Colt has for the kids.

So, that means one more season in the NFL is still possible, right?

"That would be cool, but I think it's over," Anderson said.

The "I think" makes me believe that there is still a chance that I can finally get it right when offering unsolicited advice to Colt Anderson.

"I'm definitely not in the shape I was in when I was playing," he said. "But if you give me a couple of months, I could probably get back to it."

Yep, watch out for that new Silver and Black line from UPTOP.

Correction

In the front page story, "Historic North Star Diner & Ice Cream Parlor ready for next incarnation" in the Mar. 13 issue of the Butte Weekly, we inadvertently left out the names of previous owners of the North Star, Bill and Gloria Clark, who had the business from 1978-1990. During that period, the couple, both noted artists, painted the iconic mural of a cowboy and his ice cream-loving horse on the southeast corner of the building. We apologize for the omission.

What Should You Do With an Inheritance?

If you were to receive a sizable inheritance, what should you do with it? This money could help you achieve some of your important financial goals – so you'll want to think carefully about your choices.

Of course, everyone's needs are different, so there's no one "right" way to handle a large lump sum. But here are a few suggestions that may be useful:

Pay off some debts. Depending on the size of your inheritance, you may want to consider paying off some, if not all, of your debts, such as car loans, personal loans and student loans. You might even consider paying off your mortgage, but you may not want to, as you might be able to get a better return on your money by investing it. Also, if all your money is tied up in a house, you'll typically have less liquidity than you would get from your investments.

Contribute more to your retirement accounts. You may now be able to afford to contribute more to your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan, as well as to your IRA. These accounts offer tax benefits plus an array of investment choices, so they are excellent ways to build resources for retirement.

Save for college. If you have children, or grandchildren, whom you would like to someday send to college, you might want to put some of your inheritance into a college savings vehicle, such as a 529 plan, which provides tax benefits and gives you great flexibility in distributing the money.

Build an emergency fund. If you haven't already built an emergency fund containing six to 12 months' worth of living expenses, you may be able to do so now, using part of your inheritance. Keep the money in a liquid, low-risk account, so that it's readily available to pay for unexpected costs. Without such a fund, you might be forced to tap into your long-term investments.

Above all else, you may want to get some help. If you don't already have one, a financial professional can recommend ways of using the money to help you meet your goals. For one thing, you could further diversify your investments, which is important, because diversification can help reduce the effects of market volatility on your portfolio. (Keep in mind, though, that diversification can't prevent all losses or guarantee profits.)

And a financial professional can help you determine how much your plans could change due to the inheritance. To name just one possibility, you might be able to move up your retirement date. If so, you'd need to adjust many aspects of your financial strategy, such as when to take Social Security, how much to withdraw each year from your retirement accounts, and so on.

You'll also need to consult with your tax advisor, because some inherited assets, such as an IRA, could have tax implications.

Your loved ones worked hard, and probably invested for many years, to leave a legacy for you. So, to honor their memory, do whatever you can to handle your inheritance wisely.

St. Paddy's Day Parade one of the best ever

By Robin Jordan

We're taking a break from railing on whiners and lambasting stupid proposals in the Montana Legislature this week to give a shout out to the Butte America Foundation, Butte-Silver Bow's Law Enforcement, Parks and Recreation and Public Works for doing a bang-up job organizing and staging Butte's St. Patrick's Day Parade.

Of course, these folks couldn't take responsibility for the weather, but that was ideal as well with temperatures near 40 degrees and not a snowflake in sight.

Since 2019 isn't an election year, politicians gave the parade a pass for the most part, but we noticed the Butte Democrats had a good and colorful contingent marching. Usually, the parade lineup suffers in the number of entries in non-election years, but we counted close to 50 entries. This is a good sign that the parade is growing, for which we can credit BAMF for recruiting efforts.

The parade entries just keep getting better, too. Even old favorites are brushing up their acts, adding better decorations, more fun costumes and plenty of humor to the procession.

Crowd management seemed to take a giant step forward this year with better fencing at the points where the parade goes around corners or crosses intersections. As a former equestrian who knows how hard it is to control a horse when people are pushing, shoving and running into the street near your mount, we can say that this needed to be done. It's safer and it makes the parade move more smoothly without gaps created by pedestrian bottlenecks in the route.

Closing some streets to motorists, a move Butte-Silver Bow started a couple years ago, makes it much easier for the crowd to move around the Uptown area and improves pedestrian safety. Having the parking garage makes it much easier for parade-goers to find a place close to the route as well.

The fact that St. Patrick's Day fell on a Sunday this year meant that more families were able to attend with their kids and we enjoyed seeing all the little ones dressed in their St. Patrick's Day finery. Many adults got into the spirit with crazy costumes as well, but we noticed the adult behavior was pretty good overall. We only saw one mild altercation—a shouting match over a man on the phone blocking stairs—but no serious trouble. That's good.

We thought the parade was one of the best we've seen, and we've been going to the St. Patrick's Day parade in Butte since the 1980s.

Now, we have to go back into editorial mode for a moment to bash on reporters who constantly revive the story of the year back in the early 2000s when rowdy celebrants tried to tip over a police car and a man climbed onto the awning at the M&M to relieve himself on the crowd.

Quit doing that. Just quit. Butte Law Enforcement has done a wonderful job in recent years, mainly by doing walking patrols through the crowds Uptown, which diffuses a lot of the crazy mob behavior and prevents trouble in general. Every time a reporter brings up the bad old days, it just reinforces the opinion people from other towns have that Butte's St. Patrick's Day celebration is a drunken free-for-all. We don't need to keep reinforcing that impression. It's bad for the Butte's reputation and it's bad publicity for our festivals and parades in general. Knock it off!

Another Lie to The Base

By George Waring

Following Judge T.S. Ellis III's decision to show excessive leniency in his sentencing judgment on Trump campaign manager Paul Manafort, Trump added another lie to his 10,000 plus since inauguration.

Trump tweeted: "Both the Judge and the lawyer in the Paul Manafort case stated loudly and for the world to hear that there was NO COLLUSION with Russia."

According to the New York Times, Trump simply ignored what Judge Ellis emphatically stated in introducing his decision: "Mr. Manafort was not before this court for anything having to do with collusion with the Russian government to influence this election."

The lenient sentence of 47 months Ellis gave Manafort was punishment for not reporting more than $16 million in income, hiding another $55 million in foreign bank accounts, and fraudulently receiving $25 million in loans "secured through lies to banks." Manafort was convicted of bank fraud, money laundering, and tax evasion.

Having just completed my income tax filings, I didn't enjoy seeing a multimillionaire criminal Trump accomplice being spared his recommended 20-year sentence because, said Judge Ellis, he had led a "blameless life."

A "blameless life?" Before Manafort joined a Putin-engineered subversion racket to overthrow democracy in Ukraine, he was a partner in the infamous Republican lobbying firm of Black, Manafort and Stone, a group known as the slimiest of all lobbying outfits in D.C. It lobbied Congress on behalf of Mohamed Siad Barre of Somalia, dictator Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines, dictator Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire, and Jonas Savimbi of Angola. According to "The Torturer's Lobby," a report published by The Center for Public Integrity, Manafort's firm received millions in the early 1990's for representing dictators. Manafort swam at the bottom of the Swamp of Corruption that candidate Trump had promised to drain.

Regarding Manafort's sentence, Dan Rather said, it "is just a slap on the wrist to a big-time criminal, a minor sentence for another elite, well-connected Washington big-shot. A lot of black kids in the projects routinely get worse sentences than Manafort has gotten."

The morning when Manafort's sentence was announced, MSNBC ran a picture of a young African-American woman who had just been sentenced in Texas to five years' imprisonment for voting while she was on probation. On to another outrage: The Fox News partnership with Trump's White House.

This is the subject of Jane Mayer's latest expose in the March 8th edition of The New Yorker, "Trump TV."

Within her lengthy essay, Mayer recounts a 1994 conversation between Rupert Murdoch and Reed Hundt, the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission under Bill Clinton. After a dinner at Murdoch's Los Angeles estate, the Australian publisher confided to Hundt that he planned to launch a radical new television network. Mayer writes, "unlike the three established networks [CBS, NBC and ABC] which vied for the same centrist viewers," Murdoch said "his creation would follow the unapologetically lowbrow models of the tabloids Murdoch had published in Australia and England." Murdoch envisioned the creation of a "narrow audience that would be entirely his. His core viewers would be football fans." Murdoch had just bought the rights to televise NFL games.

Reed Hundt related to Mayer that Murdoch had told him "that he was going after a working-class audience." In fact, "he was going to carve out a base---what would become the Trump base."

Using direct quotes from Hundt, Mayer continues:

"I was at this house, more expensive than any I could ever imagine. And Rupert Murdoch, from Australia, was saying to me, 'I'm going to break up the three-party oligopoly that has governed the most important medium for the communication for politics and policy in this country since the Second World War.'"

Hundt then told Mayer: "It was like a scene from 'Faust.' What came to mind was Mephistopheles."

Mayer concludes her section on the birth of the Trump base with the words of Blair Levin, Hundt's chief of staff at the FCC in the 1990s.

"Fox's great insight wasn't necessarily that there was great desire for a conservative point of view."

Carousel Corner

By Jim Ayres

Hopefully you have noticed the absence of the Carousel Corner from your Butte Weekly. With a fairly limited schedule of activities going on at the Carousel it was decided that this would be a monthly column. From now on you can catch up with what's going on at the Carousel in the third issue of the Weekly each month.

In Butte were very proud of our Irish heritage, in fact St Patrick's Day lasts all month long. Our Carousel is a reflection of Butte's mixed heritage. The sponsors chose what they wanted to include on their horse or rounding board so naturally some of them chose to honor their roots. It's for that reason that each item tells its own story. Tammany was carved in the likeness of Marcus Daly's race horse, from which it draws its name. Sponsored by the people of Anaconda, Tammany was carved by the Missoula Carousel volunteers. John Murphy, a good Irish name, organized the effort to see this horse on the Carousel. Irish was sponsored by the Lester family, proudly wearing a green bonnet and carrying a pasty in its saddle bag, there can be no denying this horse's lineage. Celtic Pride was sponsored by the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Celtic Pride has both the American and Irish flags carved on its side. In fact, the AOH sponsored a free children's day this St. Patrick's Day at the Carousel. Free rides for all the children and green popcorn for everyone. Of course, we had to learn how to make green popcorn.

I must say those Hibernians know how to host a party. Everyone was dressed in their finest Irish splendor. This was one of the most popular events we have had the pleasure of participating in. The party started at 1, after the parade.

The parking lot was full and families poured into the building. The Carousel ran at capacity all afternoon and there was a constant line for popcorn and shamrock shaped pizza at the concession stand. We may have created a run on green food coloring. It was so successful everyone involved agreed to do it again next year.

We are working on a plan for Easter now with a promised visit from the Easter Bunny provided he can find an appropriate outfit to wear.

Ann Bone tells me that her book sales are going well. If you would like to pick up a copy of The Spirit of Butte or Goodnight Butte they are both available in the Carousel gift shop Tuesday through Sunday.

If you would like to book a party or event please call the Carousel at 406-494-7775. To send a memorial or donation our mailing address is PO BOX 4133, Butte, MT 59702

What's Cooking

Pork Loin Roast with Veggies

By Debbie Sorensen

Since winter keeps hanging on, it seems like another one pan supper could be a great menu item. This pork loin roast with veggies is cooked all together in one baking pan, making for an easy preparation.

Browning the pork with the simple rub, not only gives a stimulating flavor, but also a nice texture contrast on the meat. The potatoes and carrots (if you use regular carrots) can just be scrubbed well and chopped and sliced, rather than peeled, if you would prefer.

The recipe comes from "Healthy & Homemade 2013 Fitness Calendar" from Iowa State University and Extension and Outreach, via Bernie Mason of Yellowstone County, Montana.

- | | |
|---|------------------------------|
| 2 c. onions cut in wedges (2 med) | 2 c. potatoes, diced (2 med) |
| 2 c. baby carrots (3/4 lb bag) whole or sliced | 2 T. vegetable oil |
| 1/4 tsp. salt | 1/4 tsp. pepper |
| | 1 1/2 lb. pork loin |

The Rub:

|------------------------|-----------------|
| 1 1/2 T. brown sugar | 1/2 tsp. pepper |
| 3/4 tsp. garlic powder | 1/4 tsp. salt |

Preheat oven to 400°. In a bowl, mix veggies and 1 tablespoon oil, salt and pepper. Line a 9"x13" baking pan with aluminum foil. Lay veggies around the edge of the pan and put in oven. Use a small bowl to make the rub Mix the brown sugar, garlic powder, 1/2 teaspoon of pepper and 1/4 teaspoon of salt in the bowl. Sprinkle the rub over the loin. Press gently so the rub sticks to the roast. Heat the remaining

1 tablespoon vegetable oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Add the loin; brown the sides of the meat. Turn after about 2-3 minutes per side. Transfer the pork to the center of the pan with veggies. Bake for about 40-50 minutes. A meat thermometer should read 145 degrees. Check the temperature after 30 minutes in the oven. Remove from oven when correct temperature has been reached; let stand for 5 minutes. Slice meat and serve.

Cooking at Home

In our Lifestyle Classes, one challenge for participants is making the change from eating out or picking up take-out for dinner to preparing and eating meals at home. Whether the habit began because of time and busy schedules, lack of desire to cook or craving certain foods, it can be changed with patience and planning. Research shows that the benefits of home cooking range from happier, healthier kids with fewer addictions to better mental health for all.

A good place to start is your kitchen. Is it a well-equipped pleasant place to cook? Do you have the essentials necessary to prepare a decent meal? Decide if changes need to be made in the organization of your kitchen or if some additional equipment will make a difference. Having a nice set of measuring spoons and cups, good mixing bowls and decent cookware and utensils will make food preparation at home an easier task.

Meal planning is a great next step. If all household members sit down and plan the meals for the week you can be sure favorites are included and choices will be liked by all. At the same time, prepare a grocery list so ingredients can be purchased and are fresh and handy when the meals are being prepared. Think of balanced nutritious meals but don't feel they must be complicated or fancy.

You can also plan your meals out, or meals of left-overs, at the same time. This will give everyone a break and eating out less frequently will make it more of a treat. Converting from mostly dining out and take out to eating primarily at home can be a gradual process, but the benefits will be worth the effort. Aim for five or more home-cooked dinners per week for the best effect on health. That is the number associated with a longer life.

Starting with some basic, easy-to-prepare meals will keep home cooking from being overwhelming. One approach is to prepare at home some of your favorite restaurant or take-out food. Pick up some good quality lean ground beef and buns that you prefer (anything from whole grain to white to sandwich thins) and your favorite condiments. Whether you barbecue or prepare your burgers indoors, they are sure to be delicious.

Making tacos from scratch with corn tortillas from the store and mixing ground turkey or beef with taco seasoning is another easy way to replicate a meal from a fast-food window. Shopping for the toppings is fun and there is more variety. Pizza can be made at home from a prepared crust, or even English muffins, with pizza sauce and low-fat mozzarella. Select your favorite toppings and consider including vegetables for their nutritional value.

One benefit of cooking at home is the likelihood that the family will then sit down and eat together, catching up on the day and having family discussions. Cooking will be more fun if much of the family is included in making the meal. Not only is it helpful to get everyone involved in preparations, it also teaches the younger members valuable cooking skills.

For favorite meals from your heritage or when you were growing up, seek recipes and instruction from family members, the internet or cookbooks to learn to reproduce these unique meals yourself. Getting together with the people who know how to cook these treasures and learning from them the secrets is a nice social and rewarding way to spend an evening.

Whether you decide to cook at home more to enjoy the nutritional benefits or for better communication and connections with your family, or both, you will eat less sugar and less processed foods. This will result in better physical and mental health for all. Whether you gradually increase eating at home or dive in all at once, you'll notice the positive difference on you and everyone in your household.

Cordwood construction subject of Mar. 27 Archives presentation

The Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives will continue its Brown Bag Lunch series on Wednesday, March 27, with a presentation by Chris Borton about "The Beauty of Cordwood Construction."

A Cordwood building is the "other" kind of log home based on a centuries-old technique that is as easy and inexpensive for beginners as it is beautiful. With the look of artistic stone from a distance, Cordwood homes are naturally well insulated, provide excellent thermal mass, and two people can build them without cranes, ropes, or chisels. Borton, co-founder and director of Sage Mountain Center, will return to the Archives to share his 25+ years of construction expertise to cover the basics of log selection, construction methods, and mortar mixing all while giving you great ideas for building your own garden shed, chicken coop or custom home. The presentation will begin at noon and run about an hour at the Archives, 17 W. Quartz. Guests are encouraged to bring a sack lunch. Coffee and water will be provided. Brown Bag Lunches are held the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. Upcoming lectures will focus on topics of local interest. For more information, contact the Archives at 782-3280.

$9,085 and $13,930 and married/head of household with income between $12,113 and $21,197 can get a 50 percent reduction. Singles with income between $13,931 and $22,711 and married/head of household with income between $21,198 and $30,281 can get a 30 percent reduction.

To qualify, homeowners must apply by April 15. Once a property owner applies, he or she will be notified each year if he or she qualifies and will be included in the program's annual income verification until he or she moves from the residence.

The second form of property-tax help is the Elderly Income Credit, which is included on the Montana Individual Income Tax Return form. Fisher said homeowners can apply for the credit even if they are not required to file income tax returns. The credit is available if the applicant is 62 or older as of December 31, 2018, has a total household income of less than $45,000 for the tax year, has lived in Montana for at least nine months during the year and occupied a Montana residence as a renter, owner or lessee for at least 6 months during the tax year.

The third program is Montana Disabled Veteran Property Tax Relief, which is available to veterans certified as 100 percent disabled. Veterans and unmarried surviving spouses can qualify. The applicant must own or be under contract to purchase a home/manufactured home and live in the home as a primary residence at least 7 months of the year. The applicant must provide a letter from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs verifying he or she is currently rated or paid at the 100 percent disability rate for a service-connected disability. Surviving spouses must provide letters from the VA verifying that their deceased spouses were rated or paid at the 100 percent disability rate at the time of their death or died while on active duty or as the result of a service-connected disability. Deadline to apply is April 15.

For tax year 2019, the income guidelines are:

A single applicant's Federal

Adjusted Gross Income, excluding capital and income losses, must be less than $52,507 and head of household and married applicants' income must be less than $60,585. Spouses' incomes are included regardless of whether they are owners of the property. Unmarried spouses' income must be less than $45,775. Applicants need only report their income one time; in future years, eligibility will be determined through an annual verification process.

Fisher said forms for all three property tax relief programs are available at the Assessor's Office or online. Anyone with questions about the programs can call the office at 497-6290 or 497-6282.

On a separate subject, Fisher reminds the public that the state will be conducting a property reassessment this year. Property owners should get a notice of their new assessment in the mail in May or June. Those who want to dispute the reassessment need to do so within 30 days of receiving the notice by calling the Assessor's Office.

Civil rights marchers from Selma head for Montgomery, with Martin Luther King, Jr. among the 25,000 who participate. TWU (Transportation Workers' Union) contingent included, to support voting rights drive. Earlier efforts to hold the march had failed when a minister was fatally beaten by a group of Selma white Conservative "Christians". -1965

Friday, March 22:

Mark Twain, a proud lifelong member of the Int'l Typographical Union (now part of CWA), speaks in Hartford, Conn., extolling the Knights of Labor's commitment to fair treatment of all workers, regardless of race or gender. -1886

800 striking workers at Brown & Sharpe in Kingstown, R.I. are tear-gassed by state and local police in order to protect low wages, dangerous conditions and high profits in what was to become a losing 17-year-long fight by the Machinists Union. -1982

Saturday, March 23:

Trial of 101 Industrial Workers of the World (IWW) members begins in Chicago for opposing World War I in public; tried for violating the Espionage Act. The judge sentenced Bill Haywood and 14 others to 20 years, the rest shorter sentences. Fined a total of $2,500,000 the IWW (a Democratic American Labor Union), was shattered on behalf of the greedy Capitalists. Haywood jumped bail and fled to revolutionary pre-communist Russia, where he remained until his death 10 years later. -1918

The Norris-La Guardia Act goes into effect. The Act restricts injunctions against Unions and bans yellow dog contracts, which require newly-hired workers to declare they are not Union members and will not join one. The Act was championed by U.S. Rep. La Guardia and Senator Norris, both Progressive Republicans. -1932

15 workers die, another 170 are injured when a series of explosions rip through BP's Texas City refinery. Investigators found BP management gave priority to cost savings over worker safety. -2005

Sunday, March 24:

Groundbreaking on the first section of the New York City subway system, from City Hall to the Bronx. The New York subway workers would go on to found the TWU in 1934. The TWU established a reputation for left-wing politics (people before profits) and was one of the first Unions to join the CIO. -1900
Hawaii: 7,500 hotel workers and members of HERE, Local 5 end 21 day strike of 11 major hotels. They struck to protect their earned pension benefits that the CEO's wanted to rob. -1990

Monday, March 25:

146 workers are killed in a fire at New York's Triangle Shirtwaist Factory. A fire broke out at the Triangle shirtwaist factory, within minutes it engulfed 3 upper floors, burning to death, or causing to jump to their deaths, 146 workers, 123 of them women, some as young as 15 who were locked in by the owners. A year prior to the fire, 20,000 garment workers walked off the job in New York to protest the dangerous working conditions. They demanded unlocked fire escapes, a pay raise, 52-hour work week and overtime pay. The bosses at Triangle formed an association with the owners of the other large factories. Soon after, strike leaders were arrested. Some were fined, others were sent to labor camps. Armed thugs were enlisted to beat up and intimidate strikers. The strike was lost, no demands were met and the fire escapes remained locked (ultimately causing the death of the 146 one year later). The two Triangle shirtwaist factory owners cashed their insurance check and retired very rich men. -1911

An explosion at a coal mine in Centralia, Ill., kills 111 miners. Mine-workers President John L. Lewis calls a 6-day work stoppage by the nation's 400,000 soft coal miners to demand safer working conditions. The Capitalists fight against safer conditions citing the higher costs might cut into shareholder profits. -1947

Tuesday, March 26:

San Francisco brewery workers begin a 9-month strike as local employers follow the Union-busting lead of the National Brewer's Association and fire their Unionized workers, replacing them with scabs. 2 Unionized brewers refused to go along, kept producing beer, prospered wildly and induced the Association to capitulate. A contract benefit since having Unionized 2 years earlier, certainly worth defending: free beer. -1868
Mine disaster at Jed, West Virginia, kills 83 workers. -1912

Why is Easter so late this year?

By Paul Vang

The "early church" got it sort of wrong, and that's why Easter is super late this year.

The Council of Nicaea, which met in modern day Turkey in the year 325, set the rules for observing Easter, along with adopting the Nicene Creed as the official statement of Christian belief. The basic rule is that Easter is observed on the first Sunday after the first full moon after the Vernal Equinox. The catch is that the rule also decrees that the Vernal Equinox, for religious purposes, is deemed to be on March 21.

This year, and actually every year after 2007 in the 21st Century, the astronomical equinox falls on either March 19 or 20, and this year it takes place today, March 20, at 3:58 p.m. MDT. To be fair, in Sydney, Australia, the equinox does fall on March 21 this year. The first full moon after the equinox will be tonight at 7:43 p.m.

Taking it a step further, an astronomical Easter would, therefore, fall this Sunday, March 24.

Because the Council of Nicaea decreed that the equinox falls on March 21, the next full moon will be April 19, and most churches will celebrate Easter on April 21. Eastern Orthodox churches, which follow the Julian calendar, observe Easter one week later, on April 28.

The earliest possible date for Easter is March 22, and it happens rarely; the last time in 1818. Don't hold your breath, it won't happen again until 2285. The latest possible date for Easter is April 25, which last took place in 1943 and will next occur in 2038.

Aside from the public lands rally in January, I'll confess I haven't been giving the Montana Legislature as much attention as I should. The Lege, as the late Molly Ivins referred to the Texas legislature, is now in the second half of the 90-day session. As always, some surviving bills have merit and some are stinkers. A few bills that have merit include HB 517 that would mandate trapper education for all trappers. SB 24 increases funding for trails and outdoor recreation by increasing the voluntary motor vehicle registration fee from six to nine dollars and would generate an additional $1.8 million for trails, state parks and fishing access sites. Then there are some stinkers. HB 265, sponsored by Rep. Kerry White (R-Bozeman), would nullify

If Easter is late this year, it still won't be as late as this Easter Lily that bloomed in my garden in mid-August last year.

a state Supreme Court decision, in which the court ruled that easements for fish and wildlife conservation, or public hunting access, approved by the state Fish and Wildlife Commission, do not have to go through the Land Board. That ratified a decision by Gov. Bullock, who decided that the governor has the authority to approve such an easement, even if the Land Board had previously voted against it.

Another bill, HB 279, demonstrates how a whole can of worms can be made into law, without any clues as to what the bill is all about. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Bob Brown (R-Thompson Falls) has a one-line provision that states, "Reimbursements for receipts of costs incurred related to the trapping of wolves may be given to ethical trappers licensed pursuant to title 87, chapter 2, part 6." It sounds innocuous and vague. The purpose of the bill, however, according to Montana Conservation Voters, is to allow an Idaho-based group to pay trappers for wolves killed. In short, it allows an out of state group to place a bounty on Montana's wolves.

Another stinker threatens Montana's waters, already threatened by the Trump Administration's revision of rules defining "Waters of the United States." SB 48, sponsored by Sen. Tom Richmond (R-Billings) would allow for water pollution dischargers to receive variances for two years before they are required to produce and implement a pollution reduction ban. In other words, it gives polluters permission to poison our streams and rivers two years before the state can do anything about it.

Molly Ivins said it best. "All anyone needs to enjoy the state legislature is a strong stomach and a complete insensitivity to the needs of the people." Paul Vang's book, "Sweeter than Candy, A Hunter's Journal" is available at Books & Books, Cavanaugh's County Celtic, The Bookstore in Dillon, or online at <http://writingoutdoors.com>.

Silver Bow Creek

Griffin said remediation of the SSTOU cost $130 million. In order to remove the tailings, the DEQ rerouted the creek, excavated contaminated material from the original channel, then rebuilt the streambed and returned the creek to the channel. Remediation of the SSTU was completed in 2015. The Butte Priority Soils Operable Unit was added to the Silver Bow Creek site in 1987. Although millions of dollars' worth of work has been done on the Butte Hill and in the area of the creek, much more remains and is contingent on reaching a final agreement between responsible parties and issuance of a consent decree for the operable unit. Currently, the EPA and the other parties have an agreement in principle and negotiations continue toward reaching a consent decree. Remedy plans made public so far include removing mining and municipal waste in the Northside Tailings and Diggings East, capturing and treating contaminated groundwater and managing stormwater as well as capping undertreated and untreated mine waste on the Butte Hill. Some of the work completed in Butte includes capping 550 acres of exposed mine waste, Griffin said, helping reduce heavy metal contamination from stormwater running into the creek. In addition, three ponds were built in Missoula Gulch for stormwater retention are capturing 95 percent of the recoverable copper in the water, he said. Currently, there's a "gap" in cleanup of Silver Bow Creek between the area west of Montana Street and Texas Avenue, Griffin said, that will be addressed in the anticipated remedial actions once a consent decree is reached. Stormwater runoff will be addressed through three more retention ponds, which have proven effective in removing metals from the water. Polluted groundwater "hot spots" along Blacktail Creek and at Silver Bow Creek at the Butte Reduction Works will be addressed through new infrastructure to capture and treat the water to remove heavy metals.

Jason Lindstrom, Fisheries Biologist with Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks gave a presentation on the status of the Silver Bow Creek Fishery.

While trout were found in tributaries of Silver Bow Creek in the early 2000s, the first fish seen in the creek were suckers and sculpins in 2002. By 2003, brook trout were common in Blacktail creek near Father Sheehan Park. In 2006, the first trout were found below German Gulch and in 2007, the first Westslope Cutthroat were found in Silver Bow Creek.

By 2010, Lindstrom said, trout were found in all sections of the creek sampled. In 2014, the fish barrier was constructed in Durant Canyon. Sampling efforts were intensified in 2015-2018 in order to get fish population estimates.

Currently, Lindstrom said, populations are variable from section to section, but fish numbers are low overall. Those trout that spend part of their lives in Silver Bow Creek are there seasonally, escaping to the tributaries.

Anglers were quick to notice trout in the creek, so in 2012, catch-and-release of cutthroat was instituted and as of 2016, only artificial lures can be used for fishing in Silver Bow Creek.

Lindstrom said possible issues that may be limiting fish populations could include habitat quality, water temperature—trout cannot thrive in water warmer than 20 degrees centigrade (68 degrees Fahrenheit)—Butte stormwater runoff (FWP found evidence of fish kills after rain events), release of nutrients from Butte's wastewater treatment plant (nutrients lead to algae blooms, which rob water of oxygen) and metal contamination from waste remaining in the creek.

Rika Lashley, P.E. with Morrison-Maierle, said Butte's new wastewater treatment plant has greatly reduced the amount of nutrients released into Silver Bow Creek. Prior to 1968, Lashley said, Butte's wastewater treatment process mainly involved settling of waste, allowing the release of ammonia and nutrients into the creek. At the new plant, a bioreactor with four parallel trains and multiple cells allows microorganisms to break down waste through several stages and does a very good job, Lashley said, of reducing nitrogen and phosphorus. The "bugs" also get rid of a substantial amount of dissolved copper in the wastewater, possibly because they require it nutritionally.

Before the new wastewater treatment plant opened, the average amount of nitrogen released each day into the creek was 626 pounds per day. From the time the new plant went online in 2016 to 2018, the amount of nitrogen released was 87 pounds per day. The current average, Lashley said, is 74 pounds per day, and most of that nitrogen is non-biodegradable. Phosphorus, another potential nutrient, has been reduced to a mere 2.4 pounds per day.

The plant water output is 3.8 million gallons per day, although that amount was higher last spring because of stormwater, Lashley said. Temperature of the water released is less than 25 degrees centigrade (77 degrees Fahrenheit.)

One possibility for low fish numbers, Lindstrom said, is that because the remediated creek is relatively new, it hasn't developed undercut banks or much mature vegetation, which would help provide cover for fish and keep water cooler. The channel is too big and has not yet developed sediment. There may not be enough flies, bugs and macroinvertebrates to provide food.

"More water would help," Lindstrom said, "as long as it's cool enough. Maturity of willows along the creek will help with temperatures. Part of the answer may just be more time."
