Entries sought for 2018 Fourth of July Parade

By Robin Jordan

Once again, the Butte America Foundation will host the annual 4th of July Parade and the organization is now seeking parade entries and nominations for the parade's Grand Marshal.

This year's event will be the 82nd consecutive 4th of July Parade held in Butte. Although Butte held Independence Day parades before 1936, they were not held every year due to war, strikes and other intervening events. This is the second year the Butte America Foundation will be in charge of the parade.

The parade is scheduled for Wednesday, July 4 at 10 a.m. and will proceed south from the Civic Center down Harrison Avenue to Longfellow Street, where parade entries will disperse.

Entry fee will be $40 for general entries and $30 for non-profit organizations. The fees are necessary to cover costs associated with the parade and are non-refundable. Entry deadline is 11:30 p.m. Saturday, June 23. Late entries will pay an additional $40 fee and will be placed at the end of the parade. All entries must be submitted and paid for online at www.butteamericafoundation.org

The Butte America Foundation's parade insurance requires that each entrant provide a copy of the entry's current vehicle registration and owner's name, copy of the driver's license and name of the designated driver and proof of liability insurance.

All entrants are required to have one representative attend the pre-parade meeting Wednesday, June 27 at 7 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 224 W. Park St. Numbers will be given to participants at this meeting. If a representative cannot attend this short but important meeting, please contact Matthew Boyle at (406)498-3549 or email mjboyle14@gmail.com in advance or the entry will be removed from the parade lineup.

Parade assembly will begin July 4 at 7 a.m. at the Civic Center parking lot just off Harrison Avenue. If larger entries need to be set up the night before, call Boyle at (406)498-3549 to arrange accommodation. These entries will be allowed to set up at the Civic Center July 3 at 9 p.m. Due to construction, the only access for assembly will be off Harrison Avenue.

The parade route will begin with entrants lined up and assembled on Civic Center Road and will turn south on Harrison Avenue. Entrants will proceed on Harrison Avenue 2.2 miles and either turn west on Longfellow St. or continue south and turn east on Elizabeth Warren Avenue to disassemble and return to the Civic Center.

Nominations for the parade's Grand Marshal are also being sought. Nomination forms are online at www.butteamericafoundation.org. The organization asks that those nominating persons for Grand Marshal make sure their nominees are willing to serve if chosen.

ROCKIN THE RIVERS 2018 August 9th-12th 18 YEARS YOUNG AND STILL ROCKIN

Rockin' the Rivers has announced their 2018 lineup and it reflects the evolution of the rockfest, celebrating almost two decades of bringing live rock to Montana. With major hit makers from yesteryears to today, Rockin' the Rivers is four days of nonstop music not to be missed.

American rapper, singer, and songwriter Everlast hits the stage as Friday night's headliner. Complex and controversial, Everlast is best known for the gritty and moving hit "What It's Like," which spent 30 weeks on Billboard's Main Stream Rock chart, eventually peaking as the nation's #1 song. Fans will also recognize hits "Ends," "White Trash Beautiful," and the social rap "I Get By."

Theory of a Deadman is headlining Saturday night and ever since their last appearance at the festival in 2015, the band has only gained more traction and a larger following. Theory's popularity comes from creating songs that appeal to all fans by speaking to situations that many people face in their everyday life. Their newly released album, "Wake Up Call," features the catchy soul-searing single "Rx (Medicate)," which tackles society's need to find a release from the routine of daily life. Other hits include "Bad Girlfriend," "Lowlife," and "Angel."

The festival finishes the weekend with Sunday's headliner: classic rock artist Tommy James and the Shondells. As one of the most iconic bands of the 60s and 70s, this band has sold over 100 million records worldwide. Tommy James has one of the longest strings of nonstop hits in US chart history, including "Mony Mony," "Crimson and Clover," "Crystal Blue Persuasion," and "Draggin' the Line."

Additional artists rounding out the festival include: Fuel, Skid Row, Dennis Quaid and the Sharks, The Grass Roots, Stephen Percy of Ratt, Wayland, Eve 6, Head East, Red Sun Rising, Adelta's Way, Whiskey River, Washed in Black (A Tribute Band to Pearl Jam) Hell's Belles and many more.

For a complete list of the lineup and to purchase tickets and camping, please visit Rockintherivers.com or call 406-285-0099. Contests and up-to-date information can be found on our Facebook page.

Last week, the Missoulian reported that Missoula Big Sky boys' basketball coach Bryan Ferriter has been "relieved of his duties."

My first thought after seeing this news was to ask out loud, "Who in the heck is Bryan Ferriter?" It turns out that he is the guy we all know as Spud Ferriter, a 1990 Butte Central graduate.

People who went to high school with Spud honestly had no idea his birthname was Bryan.

The second thought was that Spud must feel so relieved. It is as if he came home from a long day of work, sat in his recliner, and Missoula Big Sky took off his shoes and handed him a cold beer.

So relaxing.

Often when schools or teams fire a coach, they issue a statement saying that the coach was "relieved of his (or her) duties." It sounds a lot better than saying they fired the coach.

BUTTE SPORTS

Spud Ferriter does not need Missoula Big Sky's relief

You'll never see a school announced that they "kicked the coach to the curb" or "canned" the coach. Rarely, if ever, will the word "fired" be used.

Most school administrators take the chicken way out and try to let themselves completely off the hook asking for the coach's resignation.

If I ever win the Power Ball and hit Black 17 when I let my winnings ride, I will buy a professional baseball or football team. When it comes time to change coaches, you'd better believe he will be "fired." If I can find harsher language, I will use it.

If I was in charge, most of the guys who coached my favorite teams over the years would have been thrown out of the club's facilities like Ace Rothstein booted the cowboy in the movie "Casino."

"I want you vacate this guy off the premises, and I want you to exit him off his feet and use his head to open the (explicative deleted) door."

Using soft language is understandable from the schools and teams because, well, it just sounds better. It makes the athletic director look like a nicer person, and everybody wants to look like a nice person.

Really, who likes a person who walks around saying "You're fired" all the time?

The softer language protects the AD more than anything because, at the end of the day, the coach has still been fired, no matter what words are used.

The language reminds me of the Great George Carlin's routine about dying. Instead of saying "I'm old," we'll say things like "I'm getting older." The language does not change your age.

"I'm getting old," Carlin said, "and it's OK. Because thanks to our fear of death in this country, I won't have to die ... I'll pass away."

We have not heard a single joke from Carlin since he "passed away" in 2008, so I'm guessing he is, indeed, dead.

The Missoula Big Sky coaching move comes after Spud's Eagles went 0-20 during the 2017-18 season.

Clearly, all of those losses were on the coach.

While other coaches were drawing up plays for their team to make baskets, Spud was calling for air balls and turnovers. Had the school changed coaches last year, the Eagles would have probably won the Class AA State title in March.

Of course, those last three sentences were sarcasm. A high school coach can only do so much.

Sure, some coaches are clearly better than others, but most of the time a champion is decided by the players.

What if Spud had the same roster coach John Cislo used to win the state title at Great Falls Russell? He might not have delivered Big Sky its first title since 1997, but he certainly would not have been shown the door.

The Class AA in Montana is a numbers game. The schools with more players, generally speaking, have more talented players.

Missoula Big Sky has the smallest enrollment in the Class AA, so it is not exactly a coincidence that the Eagles had the worst record.

Enrollment is not the only indicator of success, but it certainly plays a big part in it.

My third thought after reading the story about Spud's relief was to wonder what in the heck a sports reporter was doing using the soft, dishonest language usually reserved for the people doing the firing.

Not only is it insulting to the readers, it is insulting to the coach.

After thinking about it, though, maybe the paper did use the correct language for most coaches.

Nobody in his or her right mind would coach high school basketball in the first place. Coaches make very little money, and they have to put up with knucklehead parents and delu-sional fans.

So, walking papers for most sane coaches would actually be a relief.

Anyone who ever saw Spud play the game, however, knows that is not the case of the former Butte Central guard. He does not need your softened words.

His team did not win a game last season, but the Eagles competed. They made close games out of a lot of games that should have been blowouts.

Spud's Eagles played a lot like Spud played when he was part of a Butte Central team that made a Cinderella run to the 1990 Class A State championship game at the Brick Breeden Fieldhouse in Bozeman.

He was never a big scorer, but Spud was the epitome of the pesky defender. He was tireless, and he made life difficult for opposing guards night after night. He did the little things that help teams win.

Spud was always tough as nails.

The Maroons, who had a losing record in the regular season, certainly would not have won the divisional title and their first two games at state in 1990 without the likes of Sean Walsh and Ryan Murphy that season.

Central, which fell to Dillon in the title game, also would not have advanced that far without Spud, who definitely had the best celebration of all the Maroons following their semifinal victory over Colstrip.

Murphy hit a running 15-foot jumper as time expired to give the Maroons the Friday-night win and a berth in the state title game.

Pat Kearney was screaming on the radio, and the large Butte Central crowd entered a state of pandemonium.

Spud ran toward the student section and jumped onto the press table in front of the BC student body. He raised both hands above his heads, and stood on the table as his friends and classmates mobbed him like he was Bruce Springsteen standing on the edge of the stage.

He had the look of a guy who would never need to be relieved by a school administrator.

Tough job ahead for new Public Works Director

By Robin Jordan

When David Letterman had his late-night TV show, one of his long-running catch-phrases was, "I wouldn't give that job to a monkey on a rock."

That phrase pretty much sums up the job of Public Works Director for Butte-Silver Bow, a job recently vacated by Dave Schultz, who has resigned to pursue private consulting work. Schultz has held the position since he was appointed in 2014 by then-Chief Executive Matt Vincent.

Being Public Works Director in Butte-Silver Bow is a tough job. The Public Works Director oversees 126 employees and is responsible for a number of divisions, including roads, water, sewer, transit, parks and recreation, and central equipment and maintenance. While each of these divisions has its own head, the Public Works Director has to know all the details of what's going on in each division and is responsible for the budgets, who's doing what and where the funding is coming from. He's the guy that has to go to the Council of Commissioners, practically on a weekly basis, to explain every planned project and he's the guy that everybody calls when there's a question or a problem.

We can imagine how much fun it is to be the guy that gets called every time there's a break in a water line or someone's sewer backs up or the snowplow is late. And, that's on top of having to be in pretty much every meeting involving the big projects in Butte-Silver Bow, dealing with union and non-union employees and overseeing contractors on some projects. Oh, and he has to keep track of all the details of the department's complicated budget, with its myriad revenue streams, debts and ongoing expenses like operation and maintenance.

During his time as Public Works Director, Schultz oversaw construction of the Basin Creek Water Treatment Plant and completion of the Metro Sewage Treatment Plant. He was involved in the design, planning and construction of the new Ridge Waters Waterpark and other improvements underway at Stodden Park. He also had to oversee much of the work involved in choosing a new location for the county shops as well as miles of water line and sewer line replacement throughout town and expansion of the county landfill. He also pushed for a revamping of the county's garbage collection system, expansion of bike lanes and the creation of a single road maintenance district for Butte-Silver Bow that should more evenly distribute the cost of road maintenance and ensure the county has the money needed to keep up with the expense.

Schultz's ideas haven't been universally popular with the public, but no one could say he hasn't been busy in the last four years or so. And, we're sure he's probably heard every kind of criticism and put up with more than his share of abuse for every move the county has made in those years.

Butte-Silver Bow is still in the process of finding an interim director for the Public Works Department, which will be followed by a search for a permanent replacement for Schultz. In the meantime, it's construction season—and budget season—in Butte-Silver Bow. Multiple big projects are underway and the new guy or gal will have to jump in, ready to roll, on a whole lot of fronts.

It's going to be a tough job—and we wouldn't give it to monkey on a rock.

Protecting Wall Street at the CFPB

By George Waring

Our protector of average White American Evangelicals, President Trump, can brag about another success at his next campaign rally. Something to rival his Big Beautiful Wall and his Latino deportation program. In late April, National Public Radio reported that the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau was "levying a one billion dollar fine on Wells Fargo as punishment for the banking giant's actions in its mortgage and auto loan businesses."

NPR quoted from the CFPB's filings to the effect that Wells Fargo's "conduct caused and was likely to cause substantial injury to consumers." And cited a Bureau report stating that "problems with Wells Fargo's auto loan unit persisted for more than 10 years, from October 2005 to September 2016."

According to NPR, Wells Fargo announced that it was being forced to readjust "its preliminary financial results for the first quarter of 2018, shifting $800 million in its balance sheet — and dropping its net income for the quarter to $4.7 billion."

Perhaps because of inadequate air time assigned for such news, NPR failed to mention that this giant fine levied against a Wall Street powerhouse appears to be a "one-and-done" operation, that is, it was the last vestige of a consumer-friendly legacy of the Obama administration. And we shouldn't expect a repeat under Trump.

All the work in discovering and ending Wells Fargo's fraudulent banking activity was performed by the CFPB's former director, Richard Cordray, and his regulatory staff. Appointees of President Barack Obama.

During the Obama administration, Wells Fargo was discovered to be charging prospective mortgage borrowers extra fees for locking in interest rates for lengthy periods. Even though it was the bank that was responsible for lengthy delays during which interest rates rose.

In the decade before 2015, Wells Fargo was also found to be automatically charging for auto insurance when it made car loans. Two million of its new auto loan customers were assigned Wells Fargo auto insurance, even when borrowers already had purchased the required insurance coverage on their own. This is hard to believe!

Yet, The Intercept's David Dayen reported in late April that "in about 27,000 of these extra insurance cases, the required and secretly added insurance premiums caused borrowers to default." Their cars were repossessed. As Dayen put it, these unsuspecting Wells Fargo customers had their autos "effectively stolen at the hands of Wells Fargo."

Here's what Dayen discovered to be the real story of this billion dollar settlement that NPR omitted from its reporting.

"According to the language in this April's settlement agreement, in order for homeowners and auto loan customers to receive restitution, they will have to identify an 'economic or other cognizable harm' based mainly on a specific violation of federal law, under a standard created and judged by Wells Fargo."

What? "A standard created and judged by Wells Fargo"?

Dayen writes that the Bureau has been removed from supervising the way Wells Fargo carries out its ordered restitution program. The Bureau "does get to audit the remediation plans, but there's no mechanism for forcing the bank to change those plans outside of going to a court and claiming noncompliance with the settlement."

Consumer attorneys told Dayen that the agreement left by Obama's CFPB in early 2017 was radically changed by Trump's new Bureau Director, Mick Mulvaney. The Trump era version "creates large and unnecessary hurdles for victims."

Max Gardner, whom Dayen identified as a highly regarded consumer bankruptcy attorney, asked him: "How many consumers do you think will be able to complete and document the claim forms that Wells will engineer?" And then answered, "One percent at best. This is a scam by Mulvaney and Company."

According to Dayen, this is the first CFPB civil settlement with a financial company "that allows that company to design the means by which wronged consumers get paid back."

Dayen writes, "For consumers to see any money, they have to prove that they were harmed, rather than Wells Fargo having the burden of determining who was illegally charged and facing penalties for noncompliance. This puts victims in the position of having to act as their own lawyer or private investigator, tracking down the precise violation of law and affixing an explicit dollar amount. And the judge and jury for that practice will be Wells Fargo."

Under Mick Mulvaney, Secretary of the Treasury Mnuchin and Wall Street have what they want: The Corporation Finance Protection Bureau.

Alley Rally has multiple locations

As temperatures begin rise across Montana many of us are beginning to work on our lawns and on "spring cleaning" in our homes. With that in mind Butte-Silver Bow County will begin our annual Alley Rally program. Butte-Silver Bow County will be making several changes to benefit more of the community. These changes include multiple locations instead of one centralized location. The locations and dates of activity are listed below:

- June 15th and 16th - Spolar, High Altitude Center, and Sesame Street
- June 22nd and 23rd - Cinders Park, Old Glory, and Missoula Gulch

Each location will be staffed by Butte-Silver Bow employee(s) to assist in placing items in the garbage containers. The City-County of Butte-Silver will also be offering large garbage containers to neighborhood cleanup efforts available by contacting John Moodry from the Community Enrichment Department at (406) 497-6525.

The City-County of Butte-Silver Bow would also like to remind the public that the landfill will be open 7 days a week from 8:00 am to 5:30 pm at the main site and 5:30 pm to 8:00 pm at the afterhours site. These hours will stay in effect until the end of October. As always, we remind the public that all loads going to the landfill are required to be covered.

For any additional questions of comments please contact John Moodry from the Community Enrichment Department at (406) 497-6525.

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

Father's Day - Lessons About Money Can Be Priceless Gifts to Children

Father's Day is almost upon us. If you're a dad, you certainly may enjoy getting cards and gifts, of course. But, over time, you will gain even greater satisfaction by what you can give your children – such as some valuable financial lessons.

These lessons can include the following:

Setting goals – If you are contributing to an IRA and a 401(k) or similar employer-sponsored plan, explain how you build these accounts now, while you are working, so you'll have enough money to enjoy a comfortable retirement someday. And you can bring your children into the picture, too, by telling them that another financial goal is saving enough to help send them to college or to further their education in other ways.

Value of understanding the financial markets – You may actually be quite surprised at how interested your kids are in investing, especially the concept of "owning" companies through stocks and stock-based vehicles. Depending on their ages, you might even want to show them the progress of your own investments and describe, in general terms, how different events can cause the markets to rise and fall, especially in the short term. You could even discuss the difference between the basic types of investments, such as stocks and bonds.

Putting time on your side – You might want to emphasize the importance of patience, and how investing is not a "get-rich-quick" scheme, but a process that requires decades of diligence and persistence. Let your children know that it's of great value to start investing as early as possible, so you can put time on your side, giving investments a chance to grow.

Living within your means – We all know that you can't always get what you want. Stress to your children that you can't just splurge on big purchases whenever you feel like it, because such behavior can lead to bad outcomes. Use concrete examples: If you have a car that's several years old, tell your children that it would be nice to have a new one, but you simply must wait until you can afford it.

Paying debts on time – Tell your children that, no matter how good a saver you are, or how thrifty you try to be, you still have debts, such as your mortgage payment, and it's important to pay these debts on time. You may not want to get too detailed about the consequences of missing debt payments – bad credit scores may not be that easy for children to understand – but you can certainly mention that if you're always late on payments, you might find it harder to borrow money when you really need it.

By sharing these principles with your children, you will, at the least, give them something to think about, and you may well find that you've helped start them on the path to a lifetime of making solid financial moves. And who knows? If they truly master the ideas you've taught them, one day they might give you some really nice Father's Day gifts.

Challenges of Technology

Imagine what you would get done before breakfast if you lived one hundred years ago. Perhaps you would gather fresh eggs, milk the cow, and feed the animals. Before cooking, you would bring in wood and build a fire in the stove and pump the water for drinking and cleaning. Later, washing clothes would be done solely with manual labor; no machines.

Now, think of how many things you do now before your day begins that require just the push of a button, like adjusting the temperature in your house and starting the dishwasher.

Turning on water and the stove are also done with minimal effort. Laundry requires slightly more energy as you gather and sort clothes, but a button or dial will do the rest for you.

You may even have an electric toothbrush, so you don't have to manually move it around.

Look at the difference in calories burned then and now, as well as the physical effort and fitness level required to complete daily tasks. We still have choices we can make to keep moving and get exercise throughout the day, but it requires a conscious effort. Energy expended can be minimal unless we make the decision to be more active.

A good place to start is before getting into your vehicle. Can you walk or ride your bike to your destination instead? If you live on the outskirts of town, or even further out, can you drive to town and park in a spot that allows you to walk to some of the places you plan to visit or shop? Of course, if these types of choices don't work, walking and biking for the pleasure of being outdoors and enjoying our scenic surroundings is also a great way to keep moving.

Acknowledging that we need activity and exercise in our lives and then planning our days toward that goal is a perfectly good way to stay active and in shape. Workouts at the gym and at home work well. However, research has shown that an hour per day of exercise cannot make up for eight hours of sitting.

Sometimes, we can keep moving by ignoring technology. We have talked about visiting co-workers in their offices rather than e-mailing or calling. This can be more efficient as well as a better way to communicate. If those issues are taken care of, just getting up and walking around at work helps to keep us in shape.

At home, we can do old-fashioned chores, like scrubbing floors and walls. In winter, use a snow shovel instead of a blower, time permitting, for a great workout! In summer, consider expanding your garden and growing things you can eat, adding fresh produce to your diet and more work in the garden. If you have stairs, find reasons to run and up and down them more often, moving clothing and cleaning on both floors to help keep you active.

Avoiding electronic devices as much as possible, especially during nice weather, and getting outside to do whatever you enjoy, will boost your mood as well as your health. Research continues to illustrate the mental and physical benefits of exercise and of being outside. A bonus is that it also improves brain function. Being more active may not always prevent dementia, but it does reduce the chances of it happening.

If your job involves physical work, your workouts can be to improve muscle balance and flexibility, like lifting weights and Yoga. Whatever you do, make sure sitting for long periods isn't included. Stay busy and productive and include physical fitness in your life and you will reap the benefits!

What's Cooking

From bread to dessert
By Debbie Sorensen

One of the favorite desserts that Granny Lee made for our family was bread pudding. It was made with ingredients that were readily available in Mom's kitchen. Even though this recipe is basic, it is mighty satisfying and filling.

I wasn't satisfied with how my bread pudding was turning out. When I came across this recipe that Joan Earl of Great Falls had submitted to The Great Falls Tribune newspaper, I found that it worked well for me. The results have been enjoyed in my kitchen.

Bread Pudding

- | | |
|-----------------------|-----------------------|
| 3 slices bread, cubed | 1 T. butter |
| ¼ tsp. salt | ½ c. brown sugar |
| ½ tsp. cinnamon | 2 c. whole milk |
| 2 eggs, beaten | 1 tsp. vanilla |
| ½ c. raisins | ½ c. walnuts, chopped |

Place cubed bread in bowl. Add all remaining ingredients. Mix well and pour into greased 9" x 13" pan. Bake at 350° for one hour. Top with Golden Dessert Sauce.

Golden Dessert Sauce

- | | |
|---------------------|-------------------------------------|
| ½ c. butter | ½ c. sugar |
| 1 c. whipping cream | 3 T. rum, brandy or vanilla extract |

Stir butter and sugar over low heat until melted. Add cream and flavoring of choice. Bring to a boil, simmer uncovered, until slightly thickened, five to ten minutes.

"Let the world know that in A.D. 1886, in the State of Illinois, eight men were sentenced to death because they believed in a better future; because they had not lost their faith in the ultimate victory of liberty and justice!"

Riot erupts at the Miner's Union Day parade in Butte Montana. Mayor Frank Curran was pushed out of second-story window. Frustration had been growing for decades. In 1914, miners were being paid $3.50 a day, the same as in 1878, despite the fact that the price of copper had more than doubled in that same time period. -1914

Thursday, June 14:

In West Virginia, which was under martial law due to ongoing violence between striking miners and thugs hired by the mining companies, state police and vigilantes raided the Lick Creek tent colony. 47 strikers were beaten and arrested. Within a few months, much of West Virginia would be engaged in the largest civil uprising in U.S. history, as 10,000-15,000 Union coal miners battled cops and scabs. -1921

The Ku Klux Klan attacked San Pedro, Calif. IWW members during a benefit for 2 workers killed in a railroad accident. The Great Outdoors

Some travel notes on Indiana

By Paul Vang

My fly softly hit the water next to a weed bed, and started to sink. There was a swirl of water and I felt the tug of a fish on the other end of the line.

A minute later I landed my trophy, a saucer-size bluegill, or sunfish. We admired its colors and then I slipped it back into the water. It wasn't a trout, but it was a pretty little fish and it took a fly. I was happy.

If we started our tour of Indiana a couple weeks ago by catching a muskie, I ended our Indiana trip with something typical of Midwestern fishing; catching panfish in a small pond.

First a bit of a travelogue. We spent a long weekend in Fort Wayne, Indiana, for the annual conference of the Outdoor Writers Association of America. I'd long known about Fort Wayne, as when I was a kid I used to follow the Minneapolis Lakers, long before the Lakers moved to Los Angeles. A frequent opponent was the Fort Wayne Pistons. In 1957, according to Phil Bloom, the outgoing president of our organization and a lifelong resident of Fort Wayne, the Pistons moved to Detroit, primarily at the insistence of the NBA, which wanted teams to be in bigger cities.

We found Fort Wayne to be an interesting city, with a lot going on along the rivers that go through town. Two rivers, the St. Mary and the St. Joseph, come together in town to form the Maumee River, which flows into Lake Erie. Just on the other side of town is a marsh that drains into the beginning of the Wabash River, which flows to the southwest to its confluence with the Ohio River. It's a bit more subtle than the mountain range that puts Butte on the west side of the Continental Divide but it's a Divide, nonetheless. In fact, in one of our sessions, we had a presentation on the building of a big earthen dike across that marsh, to prevent the possibility of invasive Asian carp from crossing that marsh in high water conditions to the St. Mary River and getting into the Lake Erie watershed.

A fascinating attraction in downtown Fort Wayne is the Botanical Conservatory, a partially enclosed facility that holds a tropical rainforest habitat, along with a desert habitat. The most fascinating exhibit was a butterfly enclosure, filled with flowering plants and a variety of exotic butterflies from South Africa. Visitors enter through a secure vestibule and exit through another one, to make sure that no butterflies escape. The facility has a license from the USDA to import the butterfly cocoons, but has to maintain security to prevent these foreign insects from escaping.

After the conference, we avoided interstate highways to see different parts of Indiana, skirting the eastern edge of Indiana, through Amish areas, where we often saw highway signs with a horse and buggy depicted. Indeed, we did meet a horse and buggy, driven by a bearded Amish gentleman, on the U.S. highway we were on.

Our route then took us west through hilly, wooded areas, with small streams, along with the mostly slow-moving rivers of Indiana. It wasn't speedy travel but truly scenic and relaxing.

We spent a couple nights in southwestern Indiana in Evansville, as guests of our good friends, Charley and Elizabeth Storms. Charley and I got acquainted through following my columns on the internet, and has visited us several times to fly-fish the Big Hole River and hunt grouse. Charley took me to one of his spots, a secluded little pond where he has a small jon boat stashed away at the bottom of a trail through the woods.

During the course of a couple hours, we caught a number of sunfish and a couple largemouth bass. The bass weren't much bigger than the sunfish, though Charley said a friend who also fishes there has caught a couple five-pound bass in the pond.

It's good to be home, again, but our jaunt to Hoosier Country stays in our happy memory book.

Paul Vang's book, "Sweeter than Candy, A Hunter's Journal" is available at Books & Books, Cavanaugh's County Celtic, The Bookstore in Dillon, or online at <http://writingoutdoors.com>.

Carousel Corner

By Larry Hoffman

It was pretty cold most of the week, but we put on our big-boy pants and went to work anyway. Drive by and take a look at the very-visible progress.

Bill Ryan's Highland College construction class got two walls of the party room standing. They came out in some very snappy weather to make progress for us. Blake at Pro-Build donated nails and house-wrap to the project. Thanks to all of them!

Congratulations to Bill for being named Educator of the Year at the Butte Elevated awards! Jordan Artis and I used Blue Range Engineering's 30-ton crane and boom truck to raise the second-stage 12-sided ring of the carousel room twenty feet above the floor and set 12 rafters to support it. A lot of credit goes to Jordan for putting in 192 bolts and nuts, many of them hard to start, bare-handed in zero-degree temperatures. It couldn't be done with gloves on and he never said a word of complaint. Any time he doesn't have class he's ready to work on the Carousel, sometimes going there alone to finish something. Butte can be proud of this Great Falls man!

We started out with a little scissor lift donated by Marty and Mark Salusso of Centennial Concrete, which got over half of the rafters up, but it didn't do well on the snow and ice. All I had to do was ask, and Cory Markovich and Markovich Construction donated the use of their bigger scissor lift, which made a big difference. Thanks to both!

OK, hunting season is over! Let's get some volunteers organized to fill in between the Highlands College schedule, and after their semester ends. Their work days are December 7, 9, & 10, from around 10 AM to 4 PM. We would welcome carpentry or ironworker volunteers to coordinate with them and fill in the vacant hours and days, including weekends. You don't have to commit to any specific times, just a willingness when it fits in to your schedule. If you are interested, please let the Carousel contacts listed below know, or contact me at 491-4660.

Butch Gerbrant did this week, good help. Thanks, Butch!

Be a part of building a Butte landmark. Pony Up for the Carousel!! Many thanks, one more time, to those who have, recently and over the many years!
