Richest Hill Casino and Lounge to open in historic building

By Robin Jordan

A new casino and lounge is set to open soon in the old location of the Gold Rush Casino and Restaurant at 22 W. Galena Street.

Marco Kurilich of Butte is purchasing the building from owner Don “Doc” Wheeler and hopes to open the Richest Hill Casino and Lounge in early July.

Kurilich, who has been managing casinos in Butte for more than 20 years, said he had been looking at the building for years and contacted Wheeler last November about buying it.

“It always made me sad to see it empty,” Kurilich said. “I have a lot of memories of the place.”

Kurilich said he was pleased to find that the building had been kept in good shape. Since February, crews have been busy remodeling the lounge, casino and lobby areas to give them a clean, modern industrial look. Plumbing and wiring had to be brought up to code and another exit door had to be built for the lounge along Galena Street to meet fire safety codes. An old conference room area was opened up to become the casino area.

“Everything was in good shape, but the décor was kind of dated,” Kurilich said.

“Doc” Wheeler started the Gold Rush and Casino in 1987 and he and his family operated the business for more than two decades. The restaurant closed in 2008 and the casino closed in 2011.

The building was once the home of the Currie Chevrolet dealership and later housed an auto parts store. In the 1970s, it was converted into a Black Angus Steakhouse and lounge, which operated there for many years.

Last week, Kurilich received a matching grant from the Urban Revitalization Agency (URA) for work to upgrade restroom facilities to be ADA compliant. He said he will also be seeking a loan through the URA for purchase of the building.

“I wish I had contacted them earlier,” he said. “We’re in the URA district. I didn’t realize we could have gotten help with a lot of the work we had already done.”

Kurilich said he plans to open the Richest Hill Casino and Lounge the first week in July and is actively seeking someone to lease the restaurant. All of the kitchen equipment from the Gold Rush is still in place, so he hopes a lessee could have the restaurant open fairly quickly. Although he has had calls from several interested parties, Kurilich said he would like to hear from anyone who would be interested in opening the restaurant.

To contact Kurilich about the restaurant, email him at RichestHillCasino@yahoo.com

United Way Day of Caring to benefit two non-profits

United Way of Butte and Anaconda will hold its annual Day of Caring on Thursday, June 22, 2017.

The Day of Caring is a day the United Way sets aside to bring volunteers together to make a positive difference in the community through community service projects. This year’s local Day of Caring projects will focus on helping two local non-profits.

“This year United Way of Butte and Anaconda will partner with the Butte Kiwanis Sunshine Camp and the Spirit of Columbia Gardens Carousel,” said Julie Crnich, Executive Director of United Way of Butte and Anaconda.

“We are excited to once again return to the Sunshine Camp with a Day of Caring project and at the same time, for the first time help the Spirit of Columbia Gardens Carousel with projects that will get them closer to Opening Day. The assistance our volunteers provide is truly a win-win for all involved,” continued Crnich

If you would like to volunteer for the Day of Caring, please call the United Way office at 782-1255, email Julie at uwbadirector@bresnan.net , or visit their website at www.uwbutteanaconda.org

Street, new Hall members represent Butte well

Bill Foley

I have never sat across a kitchen table from Chuck Norris, but I think I have a pretty good idea of what it might be like.

That's because a couple of times over the last year, I have had the pleasure of a home visit from legendary Butte High coach Jim Street. He is the closest thing our town has to the kickboxing man who played "Walker, Texas Ranger."

Had I seen Coach Street approaching my front door when I was in high school, I would have been heading for the window like Jerry Lundegaard in the motel at the end of "Fargo."

When I started at KBOW in the mornings five years ago, Paul Panisko and I thought it would be a good idea to share a few of the classic Chuck Norris jokes with a Coach Street bend.

We read them off, halfway hoping the coach was listening and halfway hoping nobody would tell on us.

When the Boogeyman goes to sleep every night, he checks his closet for Coach Street.

Growing up in the Mining City in the 1980s, I learned at an early age to respect and admire the coach whose Bulldog wrestling teams won every Class AA state title of the decade. Even though I was never a wrestler, I saw that Coach Street represented everything that I loved about the tough, hard-nosed reputation of my hometown.

He also scared me a little bit. In high school, I was terrified to cross with him, and he wasn't even my teacher.

Coach Street once fought superman. The loser had to wear his underwear over his pants.

Probably the best thing about my job is that I have had the opportunity to get to know guys like Coach Street over the years. I really got to know him this past year that I have been serving as the executive director of the Butte Sports Hall of Fame.

Coach Street's 1988-89 Bulldogs, the team that cemented a decade of greatness in Montana, are going into the Hall of Fame this Saturday at the Butte Civic Center. So are two of his best wrestlers – his son Randy Street and four-time state champion Eric Dunmire.

The nominating process and the planning for this weekend has led me to get to know Coach Street more than I thought I ever would, and that has been the highlight of the new gig.

Coach Street counted to infinite. Twice.

I am hardly alone when I say I was a little afraid of Coach Street. The coach instilled a healthy fear into the hearts of his wrestlers over the years, too. That fear and a great deal of love and respect is still clearly there.

One of Street's best wrestlers from the 88-89 team – and maybe ever – told me he could not make it to the banquet this year. He was too busy with work.

I broke that news to the coach as we were going over how to track down some of his wrestlers at my kitchen table. Coach looked at me for a second, then said, reassuringly, "I'll call him."

Later that night, I got a text from the wrestler explaining that he had a change of plans and he will be able to make the banquet after all.

Coach Street is the reason Waldo is hiding.

Other state champion teams to go into the Hall this weekend are the 1991 Butte High football team, the 1991-92 Butte Central boys' basketball team, and the 1992 Butte High softball team.

All four teams rightly deserve to take their place alongside the Mining City immortals as the Hall of Fame celebrates its 30th anniversary.

Aside from this group being part of my first class as the executive director, it is special for me because I remember all four of these teams very well.

I watched the TV news that Saturday night in February of 1989, nervous as could be, to see if the Bulldogs pulled off yet another state wrestling title. I actually played with some of the members of the 1992 BC basketball team, and my cousin Melissa Hansen was a catcher for the 1992 Butte High softball team.

Coach Street doesn't wear a watch. He decides what time it is.

Not to play favorites, but it was hard to beat that magical season of the 1991 Butte High football team.

The Friday nights were unbelievably fun. It was also great sitting next to Brian Farren in study hall that season. That's where I got to hear the war stories throughout the season as the Bulldogs went from a team disrespected by coaches in the preseason polls to an undefeated season.

The best thing about the 1991 season was that I had chemistry class during the first period of my first year at Butte High, which was my junior year. The teacher of that class was none other than Coach Jon McElroy, yet another throw-back coach who perfectly represented Butte.

Coach Street's computer has no "backspace" button, Coach Street does not make mistakes.

Without question, there has never been a better time to be in Coach McElroy's chemistry class than the fall of 1991 when his Bulldogs were making the rest of the state look silly.

Sometimes, Coach Mac's chemistry explanations on the whiteboard would turn into a football play. It was usually one of the key plays that helped the Bulldogs win on the last Friday.

In addition to Randy Street and Dunmire, this year's list of inductees includes Anna Fabatz, Jamie (Wolstein) Toivonen, Mark Johnston, Rick Lyons, Mark DeVore, Joe Petroni, Fraser MacDonald and Dan Hodge.

Even though I don't have a vote, I am so honored that these 10 individuals are part of the first class of the Hall of Fame that I was involved in.

Coach Street has a diary. It's called the Guinness Book of World Records.

All 10 are tremendous representatives of all that has made the Mining City and the Butte Sports Hall of Fame great.

Fabatz and Toivonen were two of the best female athletes Butte High has ever seen. Mark Johnston was the Jim Street of Glasgow after he left Butte. Likewise, Hodge was the Charlie Merrifield of Kalispell.

Rick Lyons was, among other things, one of the greatest golfers the Mining City ever saw, Joe Petroni was a world-class trap shooter, Mark DeVore was a great Bulldog before helping Montana State's football team win the 1976 national title, and MacDonald, well, he's Fraser.

With these four teams and 10 individuals, the banquet on Saturday night will definitely be full of great characters. But only one will remind anyone of Chuck Norris.

Coach Street has a grizzly bear carpet in his room. The bear isn't dead; it's just afraid to move.

Dust to Dazzle Tour June 24

Butte Citizens for Preservation and Revitalization is presenting this year's Dust to Dazzle Renovation Home Tour on Saturday, June 24, from noon to 5:00. Designed to showcase recent and on-going historic residential and structural renovation projects in Butte's historic district, it will provide an opportunity to view five buildings in varying stages of renovation. The tour will include the Kelley Mansion, the iconic "Sister Houses", W. A. Clark Jr. Carriage House and Stables, and the Frank Rooney's duplex in the business district. Tea and cookies will be available throughout the tour at the beautiful Hodgens-Ryan Mansion, 105 North Excelsior.

Tickets are $12.00 each, or two for $20.00 prior to June 24th. Proceeds will benefit Butte CPR's many projects, most notably its Historic Improvement Program grant fund. While the funds raised will provide welcome assistance to those undertaking historic renovation projects in the community, the purposes of the tour are to inspire people to purchase and restore historic buildings in Uptown Butte, to show what great results can be achieved while bringing an historic building back from the brink, and to meet the varied and wonderful people who enjoy doing it.

Advance tickets are available beginning June 1 at Books and Books (206 W. Park) and Cavanaugh's County Celtic (131 W. Park). Tickets may also be purchased at the tour locations and at the Hodgens-Ryan Mansion on tour day. ## Whittier Elementary Garden Groundbreaking June 17

Whittier Elementary School will hold a Garden Groundbreaking Ceremony and Greenhouse Build Party on Saturday, June 17th.

The Groundbreaking Ceremony will take place in the Wildcat School Garden at 9 a.m., followed by the Greenhouse Build Party from 9:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Butte-Silver Bow Health Officer Karen Sullivan and other community members will be speaking at the ceremony, and all are welcome to attend and spend time in the garden for fun kids activities. Volunteers from the Butte Mile-Hi Lions Club will be generously donating their time to help with the construction, but others interested in volunteering would be much appreciated.

The Whittier Wildcat Garden was established in 2011 by former Whittier parent Marcee Cameron with the goal of connecting kids to their food and promoting healthy eating. Garden-based learning has proved to result in an increase in fruit and vegetable consumption among kids as well as an increase in their willingness to try new things. In addition, garden-based learning results in positive social skills, sparks interest in science, and provides opportunities for community involvement. In the past school year alone, more than 200 students have participated in garden activities--outdoor science lessons, art projects, harvesting produce, and planting seeds.

The greenhouse will expand garden programming and will offer exciting new opportunities for students to engage in the space. As both a season extension and classroom meeting space, students and teachers will be able to better utilize the garden for year-long learning.

Keep it positive, Butte

By Robin Jordan

We're starting to see more out-of-state license plates on the roads of Butte, signaling the beginning of the tourist season, which prompts us to issue this reminder:

Keep it positive, Butte.

Butte has a well deserved reputation for its friendly people. Sometimes, though, we give visitors the wrong impression by talking down our own town.

A few years ago, we overheard a visitor asking a waitress how she liked living in Butte. Maybe she was tired or distracted, but her disturbing answer was, "Oh, it's pretty boring. There's nothing much to do here."

We often pass along old, negative folklore about our beloved city. Some of these myths have just gotten so firmly ingrained in our consciousness that we spout them back without thinking. Imagine the impression visitors get if they are told such whoppers as:

"There's nothing uptown but boarded-up buildings."

"You can't drink the water in Butte."

"There's nothing to do in Butte but drink."

None of these things are true, but we still hear people pass along these old chestnuts and others when they're talking to visitors.

If an outsider ran down our town the way some of us do, Butte people would get fighting mad. They would be quick to point out that Butte has many thriving businesses, new and old, in the Uptown district, that Butte's drinking water is the cleanest in Montana and that Butte offers everything from great outdoor recreation to superb arts and cultural entertainment.

When we're lucky enough to talk to visitors to our city, we need to make a special effort to make a good impression. Tourism is important to Butte's economy. Our visitors spend plenty of money here with local businesses. And, they take their impressions home with them and tell their friends and neighbors about us.

With the 4th of July and festival season coming, we'll all soon have plenty of opportunities to talk to visitors. When you're asked about Butte, offer some suggestions about area attractions or recommend a good restaurant or place to stay. Let our visitors know about some of your favorite places to shop or a great place to take a walk and see the sights.

Above all, keep it positive.

Each of us can be a booster and tour guide for Butte if we just get past some of the negative thinking and old stereotypes. If we all help to welcome visitors, we'll all benefit—tourists and locals alike!

Trump to World: Drop Dead

George Waring

That was the New York Daily News headline. Trump's lengthy, rambling announcement that the US was withdrawing from the Paris Climate Accord became a classic performance of a 2016 "America First" campaign rally. Even punctuated with several expressions of Trump's deep love for coal miners, Trump's reputable White House insiders opposed withdrawal; his Goldman Sachs economist, his "moderating" daughter plotting with corporate allies, even Exxon's Secretary of State. Even the military brass were opposed. After all, Defense Secretary General James Mattis had testified to the Senate Armed Services Committee "that climate change is real, and a threat to American interests abroad and the Pentagon's assets everywhere." But none of that mattered to a self-centered delusional psychopath.

Trump ignored fact-based advisers, returning to his campaign playbook, reading fantasy-based economic arguments provided him by comrade-in-arms "alt-Right" sidekick, Steve Bannon and fellow climate denier EPA head Scott Pruitt. The latter concluded the Rose Garden rally with a sycophantic congratulatory tribute, a "Hail to the Chief" for his display of courage in the face of overwhelming resistance from America's detractors.

Agreement reigned among MSNBC commentators that Russia and Saudi Arabia were big winners. Their economic well-being depended on continued global demand for oil.

Other winners were Chinese and European developers of green energy. Their governments would continue investing in Clean Power, while the US would end federal funding. American Clean Power entrepreneurs must now rely on inadequate state government aid.

General agreement reigned concerning the historic nature of Trump's decision. He had broken with a presidential tradition established by FDR in World War II. And deepened by Harry Truman with the creation of the United Nations in San Francisco, and the Marshall Plan of 1948 to defeat European Communism. After seventy years, the US would cease to be "The Leader of the Free World." The baton had passed to France and Germany. Perhaps a new global association was coming, one between China and Europe.

Trump's "America First" slogan evokes the time of unquestioned White Racial Supremacy and "Isolationism." One commentator imagined Trump wearing spats and promising a new "horse and buggy" era, nostalgic for the vanished America of the 1890s, an era of Robber Barons, that pre-Progressive era predating the labor upheavals of 1917, the New Deal, and the Civil Rights Movement of the fifties and sixties.

One commentator recognized in Trump's "dark speech" evidence of personal anger, rage, fear, and personal isolation. Trump has no legislative victory: Obamacare survives, tax reform is fraudulent, and his budget is DOA. Trump had vented his frustrations and his personal loathing of Obama by denouncing his predecessor's Climate Accord and then burying it.

On June 3rd, CNN credited Myron Ebell of the Competitive Enterprise Institute for providing Bannon the data and arguments Trump poured forth. Ebell had responded to Bannon's news that Trump seemed to be succumbing to "moderate" advisers. Ebell funded a TV ad with video montages of Trump's campaign promises to destroy Obama's Climate Accord. Bannon showed Trump Ebell's ad. Trump's campaign spirits were revived, along with his hatred and contempt for all things Obama.

According to the Center for Public Integrity, Ebell's climate denial group benefited from billions in charity from the Kochs and ExxonMobil since 2001. And Trump chose Ebell to head his EPA transition team. Conquest solidified!

Regardless of the scandals within Trump's administration, involving accusations of treasonous behavior and secret Russian financing, Rupert Murdoch's Fox media empire continues to portray Trump as a patriotic white nationalist hero at war with liberal and globalist Washington elites, struggling to revive the 1950s.

On the importance of Murdoch and Fox are for Trump's survival, here's conservative David Frum:

"From the point of view of the typical Republican Congressman, Fox remains all powerful: the single most important source of visibility and affirmation with the voters whom a Republican politician cares about. Fox is reinforced by a carrier fleet of supplementary institutions: super PACS, think tanks, and conservative web and social-media presences, which now include Breitbart and Alex Jones. So long as the carrier fleet coheres—and unless public opinion turns sharply against the president—oversight of Trump by the Republican congressional majority will very likely be cautious, conditional, and limited." ("How to Build an Autocracy," The Atlantic, March 2017.)

In withdrawing from the Paris Climate Accord, Trump appears to have defied the wishes of Wall Street, corporate capitalism, and even "The Deep State." You know, our permanent Military-Industrial-Intelligence-Foreign Policy Complex.

Might there be Republican defections? Yes, Pence waits patiently.

What's Cooking

White Chocolate-Iced Blueberry Loaf

By Debbie Sorensen

I found some interesting information while researching recipes for Father's Day. Beginning in the Middle Ages, the Catholic Church in Europe, designated March 19 (St. Joseph's Day), as a date to honor Fathers. This was to recognize the responsibilities and influence on society that Fathers bore. The Spanish and Portuguese brought the custom to Latin America.

While there are various ideas about Father's Day in the United States, the exact origins have been disputed. However, in 1966, an official celebration for Fathers, was established on the third Sunday of June. Since then, Dads across the country have cheerfully fulfilled their fatherly duties at the grill, cooking for their own celebration.

Here's a special dessert that comes from the 2007 Pillsbury Annual Recipes. Have a special and blessed Fathers Day celebration.

White Chocolate-Iced Blueberry Loaf

- 2 1/2 c. all-purpose flour
- 1 c. granulated sugar
- 1 1/2 tsp. baking powder (for high altitude)
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. ground allspice
- 1 c. butter milk (may substitute 1 T. vinegar + milk to make 1 cup.)
- 1/4 c. butter, melted
- 2 eggs
- 1 1/2 c. fresh or frozen (do not thaw) blueberries
- 1/2 c. chopped pecans

Icing

- 1/4 c. white vanilla baking chips
- 3 T. powdered sugar
- 1-2 T. milk

Heat oven to 350°. Grease bottom only of 9"x5" loaf pan. In large bowl, mix flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and allspice with spoon. Beat in buttermilk, butter and eggs until blended. Stir in blueberries and pecans. Spread batter in pan.

Bake 1 hour 15 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan on wire rack 10 minutes.

Run knife around edges of pan to loosen loaf. Remove loaf from pan, place on wire rack. Cool completely, about 1 hour 30 minutes.

In small microwavable bowl, microwave vanilla baking chips on High 30 seconds. Stir until melted; if necessary, microwave in additional 10-second increments until melted. Beat in powdered sugar and enough milk until smooth and desired drizzling consistency. Drizzle icing over loaf. Let stand until icing is set before storing.

Financial Gifts Can Help Dad for Years to Come

Father's Day is almost here. Dad will probably like any gift you give him, of course, but this year, why not go beyond the ordinary? By presenting your father with an appropriate financial gift, you can bring him some benefits that can keep on giving.

For starters, how about a back-to-school gift for Dad? If you have children, you may already be familiar with 529 plans, which many parents use to help their children pay for college. But 529 plans have no age limits, so there's nothing stopping you from reversing the usual formula and opening an account for your father. While 529 plans are commonly used to pay for four-year colleges, the money can also go toward most two-year community colleges and trade schools, so if Dad has a future interest in learning about anything from anthropology to auto repair, the 529 plan you've established can give him the gift of knowledge and enjoyment.

As the owner of a 529 plan, your earnings can accumulate tax free, provided they are used for qualified higher education expenses. (529 plan distributions not used for qualified expenses may be subject to federal and state income tax, and a 10% IRS penalty on the earnings.) Furthermore, if you invest in your own state's 529 plan, you might be able to deduct the contributions from your taxes.

Here's another suggestion: Help Dad reach a distant goal. For example, if you know your father will be retiring in, say, 10 years, you could give him some type of bond that matures just when he retires. During those 10 years, he will receive regular semiannual interest payments, and when the bond matures, he'll get the original principal back. He can then use this money to help fulfill a long-held dream — perhaps one of traveling the world or even opening a small business. Whatever he decides to do with the money, it will make a nice retirement gift.

If you're giving Dad a corporate bond, make sure it's "investment grade," which means it has received one of the highest ratings for safety from one of the major bond-rating agencies. Investment-grade bonds are generally the least likely to default. If your father is in one of the upper tax brackets, he might benefit from a municipal bond, whose interest payments are exempt from federal income taxes and possibly state and local taxes, too. (Some municipal bonds, however, are subject to the alternative minimum tax.)

Finally, you may want to help Dad plan his legacy. Although your father may be interested in what sort of legacy he will leave, he may not yet have taken any steps in this area — in particular, he might not have created a comprehensive estate plan.

You might consider giving your father some resources on estate planning, such as books or online articles. Better yet, though, consider setting him up with a consultation with a legal professional. It will take considerable time and effort to create the necessary documents, such as a will, a living trust, a durable power of attorney, and so on — and since the future is not ours to see, it's best to take care of these tasks sooner, rather than later.

Father's Day is just a blip on the calendar. But by giving Dad some valuable financial gifts, you can help brighten all his days.

BE AWARE OF WHAT YOU EAT

In my very first article, I discussed writing down what we eat as being a good place to start when thinking of losing weight and/or eating healthier. In the fitness app lingo, this is called 'tracking'. I began tracking (again) this week and no matter how carefully I think I am eating, or what my perceived food intake is, it is always a shock to see how many calories I eat each day.

The National Institute of Health (and other similar organizations) recommend 2,000 calories per day for women ages 19 to 30 and 2,400 calories per day for men in the same age category. This is to maintain current weight and goes down 200 calories per day from 30 to 50 years of age, and another 200 down for those over 50. One study suggests that the average daily calorie intake for adults in the United States is closer to 3,700 per day, which is a huge difference!

In our Lifestyle Classes, we pass out "blue books," which are pocket-sized weekly diaries that make it easy to jot down what you eat, at what time and how much. There is a column for calories and one for fat grams. Everyone has a recommended number of both (depending on current weight) and works toward fitting what they eat into those allowances. Tracking isn't the favorite part of our classes, but it does work.

Of course, with smart phones, apps, and computer capabilities, some choose to track their food electronically and that works as well. An app connected with my fitness tracker (yes, I keep track of my steps too) is what I have been using to track my diet these past few days. Since my goal is to lose a few pounds, my calorie intake must be less than the 1,400 I need to maintain my weight. It is possible but certainly not easy.

As we discussed in that first article, it is important to start where you are right now and write down everything you normally eat. If you are eating somewhere around 3,700 calories per day, it would not be a good idea to go down to a calorie intake of 1,200 to lose weight. In fact, a good idea at that point would be to pinpoint some of the higher-calorie items in your diet and figure out how to cut back or replace them. In Lifestyle Class, if we don't want to give up a food, we use one of these three concepts: eat less of it, eat it less often, or find a healthier alternative.

In addition, seeing what foods are high in calories and low in nutrients and replacing them (over time) with nutrient-dense foods that are low in calories works both to reduce calories and increase overall nutrition. Naturally, fruits and vegetables are at the top of the list of nutrient-dense foods and most of can stand to add them to our diets. This is the time of year when we can get fresh, local produce, and the Farmer's Market is a great place to stock up!

Carousel Corner

By Larry Hoffman

Another week gone by with some progress, but it would sure be good to see more. Here we are at the middle of June, with the Fourth of July just around the corner. If we're going to be able to have horses ridden this summer, we simply need more experienced carpenters and electricians to help to guide other willing, but relatively unskilled, volunteers.

BSB got the last leak in their irrigation piping repaired last week so I was able to replace the section of sidewalk that had to be removed to do it. By the time you read this we should have poured the footings for the eight horse-head outside lights in front of the building. The pipe break set that back from last week.

The wiring team is behind the sheetrockers, actually and figuratively, but are a steady force toward getting things done. We find ourselves taking rock back down to catch up.

All the water and waste piping is in place, waiting for inspection and some additional wall framing before sheetrock and fixtures. Joe with JS Plumbing has been great to work with.

Terry Newton was the only one who came out last Wednesday for our first announced volunteer opportunity to work on the merry-go-round itself. He helped me sandblast the first batch of mechanism parts. Not the most fun job, but layers of old paint and decades of accumulated dirt and rust have to be stripped before new paint can go on. That also reveals cracks and wear that add to the long list of things to be done before it spins for the first time.

Again, we are scheduling volunteer work sessions for the next few weeks until the horses are ready to run. Mondays and Wednesdays we will be there from 2 until 6, with Wednesdays dedicated to getting the mechanism cleaned, sandblasted, painted, and assembled. We will also be there Saturdays from 9 until 3. We will work as long as we have help, the end times are just if no one shows up. There is no way to guarantee we will have something for everyone to do, but we'll try. Experienced craft help, who know what needs to be done, would be very much appreciated.

We know there have been people over the last two years who have called to offer help and not been asked to come out. That has been due to volunteers taking the messages and losing them (including me), no available work to fit the skills offered, two long winters with no heat, and near-complete scheduling failures because something(s) on the critical path didn't get done. Please forgive us for our shortcomings and keep trying. We are.

This Week In Labor History June 14th - June 20th

"Let the world know that in A.D. 1886, in the State of Illinois, eight men were sentenced to death because they believed in a better future; because they had not lost their faith in the ultimate victory of liberty and justice!" - Albert Parsons, Haymarket Martyr, hung by the State for his support of the 8-hour day

Wednesday, June 14:

In West Virginia, which was under martial law due to ongoing violence between striking miners and thugs hired by the mining companies, state police and vigilantes raided the Lick Creek tent colony. 47 strikers were beaten and arrested. Within a few months, much of West Virginia would be engaged in the largest civil uprising in U.S. history, as 10,000-15,000 Union coal miners battled cops and scabs. -1921

The Ku Klux Klan attacked San Pedro, Calif. IWW members during a benefit for 2 workers killed in a railroad accident. The KKK violently beat 300 Union members; kidnapped, tarred, and feathered others; destroyed the meeting hall, and scalded 2 children by holding them down and burning them with a pot of coffee. (IWW, We never forget.) -1924

Thursday, June 15:

Eleanor Roosevelt joins the Women's Trade Union League; a group founded almost 20 years earlier to help women workers organize for better working conditions. -1922
Battle of Century City, Los Angeles police, protecting company profits, attack 500 janitors and their supporters during a peaceful Service Employees Int'l Union demonstration against cleaning contractor ISS. The event generated public outrage that resulted in recognition of the workers' Union and spurred the creation of an annual June 15 Justice for Janitors Day. -1990

Friday, June 16:

Susan B. Anthony arrested for voting. -1873
Railroad Union leader Eugene V. Debs speaks in Canton, Ohio, on the relation between capitalism and war.

10 days later he is arrested under the Espionage Act, eventually sentenced to 10 years in prison for publicly opposing war. -1918

Butte Montana: Open pit mining resumes with 188 non-Union workers. The company offered the workers profit-sharing in place of the Union. Profit-sharing is a company incentive plan that ultimately encourages the workers to fight any attempt to raise taxes on the company, hire more workers, decrease pollution, or anything that might effect company profits and the bottom line. -1986
Inacom Corp., once the world's largest computer dealer, sends 5,100 employees an e-mail instructing them to call a toll-free phone number; when they call, a recorded message announces they have been fired. -2000

Saturday, June 17:

Mary Harris "Mother" Jones leads a rally in Philadelphia to focus public attention on children mutilated in the state's textile mills. Three weeks later the 73-year-old will lead a march to New York City to plead with President Theodore Roosevelt to help improve conditions for the children. -1903

Butte Montana: Union mine workers strike today, until November 21, 1980; their third longest strike, lasting four and a half months. -1980

Sunday, June 18:

Susan B Anthony fined $100 for voting for President. -1873
The American Federation of Teachers issued a charter to the St. Paul Federation of Women Teachers Local 28, and then, one year later, the issued a charter to the men's teachers' local. Both locals participated in the first organized teachers' strike in the nation, in 1946. -1918

Monday, June 19:

Silk workers struck in Paterson, New Jersey. The event escalated into a riot. Silk workers, forced to live as wage slaves and die young, had struck several times in the 19th century and again, in 1913 led by the IWW. -1912
The Women's Day Massacre in

Youngstown, Ohio, when police, protecting company profits, use tear gas and clubs on women and children, including infants in their mother's arms, during a strike at Republic Steel. When the cops in Youngstown couldn't find any Union leaders to beat up, they went after women picketers who were sitting in chairs to support the strike. One Union organizer later recalled, "When I got there I thought the Great War had started over again. Gas was flying all over the place and shots flying and flares going up and it was the first time I had ever seen anything like it in my life..." -1937

Tuesday, June 20:

Birth of Albert Parsons, Haymarket Martyr. Falsely convicted and hanged by the government November 11, 1887 (aged 39) he ultimately was killed because of his support of the working class and the 8-hour day. -1848

The American Railway Union, headed by Eugene Debs, is founded in Chicago. One of the early Unions to organize by industry regardless of race or ethnicity which also included the Knights of Labor and IWW. -1893
Butte, Montana: Police shot 14 IWW Union members during a labor clash. -1920

Butte Montana: Newspaper strike stops publication of The Butte Miner, Anaconda Standard, and Butte Daily Post through July 4. -1927

The City and County of Butte Silver Bow is excited to accept proposals for the acquisition and redevelopment of the property located at 40 E. Broadway

The purpose of this invitation for proposals is to offer the above-described property for private development, use, and ownership.

PROJECT GOALS - ASSET DISPOSITION

Proposals are evaluated as follows:

(1) Property must be utilized in a manner that promotes economic and social vitality within uptown Butte and the greater Butte area. (2) Seller prefers, but does not require, that a prospective buyer higher and utilize local labor and local professional services. (3) Prospective buyer must present a professional and thoughtful vision, strategy and plan for the subject property.

Seller requests high level project financials and development timeline. (4) Seller has no preference regarding retail, office or multi-family use so long as the development accomplishes Butte Silver Bow County goals as described above. (5) Proposals to be evaluated by a 7 person committee headed by Karen Brynes. Committee members may include members of the URA Board, County Commissioners office, etc. Committee members will be appointed by the Chief Executive of Butte-Silver Bow County. Deed transfer: In order to accomplish mutually beneficial development goals, Butte-Silver Bow County will transfer the deed to the buyer via a Contract for Deed with development step stones used in place of a normal payment plan. The buyer would execute the Agreement whereby they would agree to a development plan approved by Butte-Silver Bow County officials. Once the development plan is satisfied pursuant to the Development Agreement, the deed held in escrow would be recorded and the ownership officially transferred. The Buyer would be responsible for holding costs, maintaining adequate bonding and insurance, allowances for approval of plans, construction, contractors, etc. Prospective buyers may access the Request for Proposal and associated reports via:

Backing out of Paris Climate Agreement a bad move for environment

By Paul Vang

It's equivalent to a burning of books; blowing out the candles, a repudiation of shared wisdom. Those are just a couple reactions I've run across, referring to Donald Trump's announcement that he was withdrawing the United States from the Paris Climate Agreement. Others have suggested it was equivalent to stealing from our grandchildren.

A majority of the American public disagrees with the president's decision to back away from the international agreement. A Washington Post-ABC News poll indicates that 59 percent of the American public is opposed to Trump's move, though the poll also indicates that a majority of Republicans support the president. President Obama said, optimistically, last September when the United States joined the Paris accords, "Someday we may see this as the moment when we decided to save our planet," adding, "History will judge today's effort as pivotal."

Trump's decision on the Paris accords is regarded by many as the United States abandoning its role as a global leader in the fight against climate change. In this action, we join two other countries that did not join the accords, Syria and Nicaragua. Note: Nicaragua didn't join because the Paris deal didn't go far enough to combat global warming.

Perhaps we could complain that the Paris accords were not terribly ambitious with a goal of holding climate warming to below 2 degrees Celsius above pre-industrial levels. Countries would set their own targets for doing their part towards the global efforts. The United States' goal was to cut greenhouse gasses to 26 to 28 percent below 2005 levels.

I was in my car listening to National Public Radio's coverage of Trump's announcement. In the analysis, NPR replayed a clip from Trump's remarks in which he said maybe we'd re-join the agreements if he could get a better deal. The NPR commentator pointed out, "The measures are voluntary and can be withdrawn. I don't think he can get a better deal than that."

Former Secretary of State John Kerry commented that Trump's promise to negotiate a better deal was like O.J. Simpson pledging to find out who murdered his wife.

In the aftermath of the announcement, the press tried to get White House spokespersons to say whether or not the president accepts that we do have a warming climate. They were unsuccessful, though U.N. Ambassador Nikki Haley made an announcement, "President Trump believes the climate is changing, and pollutants are part of that equation," though most observers figured she was speaking more for herself than the president.

So, why should we care whether our country is participating in the Paris accords?

Certainly, there are some costs involved in moving towards an economy less dependent on resources that produce greenhouse gases, and there is no question that it's going to use energy more expensive than burning coal. But, let's not forget that in the last few years the decline in coal is because natural gas has been eating coal's lunch, so to speak.

But, to say that ignoring climate change will save money is to ignore other costs, such as the need to build new highways along our ocean coasts, and huge investments to save coastal cities from rising seas.

Okay, here in high elevation western Montana, we may not have to worry about rising sea levels. There are advantages to living in a mile-high area.

That doesn't mean we shouldn't worry about climate change. In a warming climate there are winners and losers. Trout will be losers. Moose and elk will be losers, while white-tailed deer and wild turkeys will be winners.

Ranchers, hunters, and anglers will be losers, as a warming climate dries up our already limited water resources. We may still have cold, snowy winters, but as is already the case, spring snowmelt and runoff begins earlier than historic averages. Low streamflows and late summer fishing closures are almost an annual event. It will take four years to complete our withdrawal from the Paris accords. The 2020 elections will be the people's opportunity to repudiate Trump's impulsive decision.

The Butte-Silver Bow Treasurer and Assessor remind property owners that properties with delinquent taxes from 2013 are subject to the tax deed sales process. Taxpayers with properties on the 2013 tax delinquency list are required to pay the oldest year of tax subject to deed (2013) and the current year tax (2016) plus a tax deed fee of $135.00 for each parcel up until June 9, 2017. Properties not redeemed by June 9, 2017, will accumulate an additional fee of $100.00, for a total of $235.00 on each delinquent parcel. If you believe your property may be delinquent, please reference Butte-Silver Bow's most recent list of delinquent properties at: <http://co.silverbow.mt.us/DocumentCenter/Home/View/8962>. For questions, please contact the Butte-Silver Bow Treasurer's office at (406) 497-6303.

Fab Lab will take place every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoon from 3:30-5:00 p.m. at the Butte Public Library. Kids of all ages can play games, try Minecraft, learn Coding, or build with Legos. Kids not only learn through creative play, but also learn social skills when interacting with each other. STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Art & Math) learning is important, because it pervades every aspect of our lives. High quality STEAM experiences develop critical thinking skills, increase technology literacy, and enable the next generation of innovators. By increasing youth's creativity, identity, and engagement, we can have a positive & lasting impact on the youth in our programs. If you would like more information about this program, please contact Shari Curtis at 406-723-3361 ex. 6302 or email at Programming.bsopl@gmail.com
