Bobby Hauck should tell Grizzlies to take a hike!

By Bill Foley

The University of Montana graduate in me really wants Bobby Hauck to be the next head football coach of the Grizzlies.

The football fan in me does, too.

Hauck's return to the Griz would be great on so many levels. The Big Timber native, who has a severe allergy to jock-sniffing boosters, was one of the greatest coaches the Grizzlies ever had.

Actually, for a seven-year stretch, Hauck was as good as any coach the Big Sky Conference has ever seen.

From 2003-09, Hauck's Grizzlies went 80-17. That includes a 47-6 record in conference play. Hauck's Grizzlies won outright or tied for the Big Sky title in seven straight seasons.

Oh, and there is a matter of the Cat-Griz game, which is the most important contest for the head coach of the University of Montana or Montana State University. Hauck was 5-2 against the Bobcats.

And the best thing about that 5-2 record is knowing that Hauck is still losing sleep over the two.

Hauck, who was burned by the Bobcats when they hired Mike Kramer after the 1999 season, couldn't stand the Bobcats or Bozeman. That's why his teams stayed in Livingston the nights before playing there.

It is an absolute thing of beauty when the head coach hates the biggest rival even more than the most diehard fans.

Rumor has it that Hauck is the leader in the clubhouse for the job he left after the 2009 season to take the head coaching job at UNLV, and Griz fans want him back.

You've seen the memes. Griz fans are eager for Hauck to return to his alma mater to "Make Montana Great Again."

That sounds great. The 53-year-old Hauck gets the chance to come back for one more run. He'll put in 12 years or so, go 10-2 against the Bobcats – and be pissed about the two – before riding off into the sunset.

Griz fans will rejoice and Cotton-Eyed Joe will once again rock the jam-packed Washington Grizzly Stadium, which will once again need to add seats.

The romantic in me, however, hopes Hauck is flirting with the Grizzlies so he can tell them, "Take your job and shove it." It's his turn to leave the Grizzlies at the altar.

The University of Montana and its fans do not deserve to have Bobby Hauck back. Not even close.

Three years ago, Hauck wanted the job, and he was given every reason to believe it was his.

Even Griz fans seemed to really like the idea of reuniting with the coach they once hated for losing 17 of his 97 games.

Then, the Grizzlies pulled the rug out on Hauck by hiring Bob Stitt. Nothing against Stitt personally, but picking the former Colorado School of Mines over Hauck was clearly not the right move.

The fans are even less deserving of a Hauck return than the short-sighted administration. If fans weren't making life hard on Hauck's family at the grocery store or putting up for sale signs in his yard after every big loss, they were cursing his name to anybody who would listen.

It probably wasn't as bad as the way New England treated Bill Buckner, but there had to be nights when every member of the Hauck family felt as though the coach let a slow roller go between his legs in the World Series.

Hauck was negatively compared to Marty Schottenheimer, the former NFL coach who always got to the playoffs but always seemed to lose in the first round.

The playoff comparison was so wrong on both sides. For one thing, Schottenheimer was a great coach in the NFL for a long time.

Also, Hauck went 10-7 in the playoffs, advancing to the national championship game three times in seven seasons in Missoula.

Griz fans have been quick to point out that Hauck's Grizzlies lost in the championship games in 2005, 2008 and 2009. What they won't tell you, though, is that James Madison, Richmond and Villanova were playing with scholarship players, too.

When you get four games deep into the playoffs, you're bound to meet a pretty good team.

Right now, Hauck is the special teams coordinator and associate head coach of a pretty good team at San Diego State. He's been there since the Grizzlies embarrassed him in the days leading up to the Stitt hire in 2014.

After Friday's 35-10 win over New Mexico, Hauck's Aztecs are 10-2 and heading to a bowl game – again.

In San Diego.

You would need your head examined if you would rather work in Montana than San Diego during football season.

Sure, the hoax that is global warming led to some parts of our great state seeing temperatures in the 70s or Thanksgiving. Those temperatures, though, could be below zero by Saturday in Montana. You never know in Big Sky Country.

In San Diego, they cancel school when the temperature drops below 60 for two days.

The main reason Hauck should tell the Grizzlies thanks but no thanks is that the job is an absolute no-win situation.

Hauck would be taking over a program that is nowhere near where it was when he was hired in 2003. If he were only able to win 81 percent of his games this time around, he would be seen as a failure.

Sure, after Stitt's three less-than-memorable years leading the Grizzlies, there is a chance those Grizzly fans would appreciate Hauck the second time around.

But, really, how long do you think that will last? Probably right up until the time that the clock hits zeroes on the Grizzlies' first loss under the second Hauck administration.

After all, we are talking about a fan base that gave new coach Joe Glenn the house-for-sale treatment when his team fell 10-9 at home to Hofstra in his first game in 2000.

His first game.

From Joe Gibbs to Art Shell to Caddyshack II, sequels are hardly ever as much fun as the original. It's hard to, as they say, recapture the rapture, and the success usually isn't the same.

Trust me, nobody likes Bobby Hauck more than I do. I am the president and founder of the Bobby Hauck Fan Club.

I would love to see the Grizzlies made great again, and I'd love to see Hauck get another shot as a head coach.

This time around, however, Bobby Hauck should tell the Grizzlies to take a hike.

Debate continues on best day for deer hunting

By Paul Vang

"According to Field & Stream magazine, this is the best day of the season to be deer hunting," I said to my friend, John Jacobson, as I stashed lunch, rifle, binoculars, and such in his truck.

The day was November 10, and, indeed, the annual deer hunting issue with tips on the best days to be hunting deer listed November 10 as the best day to be out. The blurb said, "We're teetering close to peak breeding season across much of the nation, and buck activity will be stellar today...today is the day."

I often chuckle when the magazine proclaims which are the best days for hunting—nationwide. It always strikes me that there are too many variables to make predictions, formulated in advance to meet press deadlines long before the magazine actually shows up in mailboxes or newsstands.

There are lots of theories about when are the best times for outdoor ventures, including the famous Solunar tables, first devised by John Alden Knight, using time of day, and phases of the moon and tides. Knight published his first Solunar table in 1936, and, for years, Field & Stream regularly published the Solunar tables and Ed Zern, the magazine's long-time humor writer, often poked fun at the Solunar tables in his columns.

In practicality, most of us don't plan our outings based on magazine predictions or Solunar tables. We go when we can get away, or when we get invited to go out, or when the weather is tolerable, or when our spouses tell us, "For Pete's sakes, go hunting or something—just get out of my hair for a day."

In any event, this year, for probably the first time ever, I was going to be looking for a deer on what Field & Stream said was THE day to be out there.

Indeed, as we got to the southwest Montana ranch we were hunting, we could see deer running across the valley. They were perfectly safe, as I wasn't ready for doing any shooting in the pre-dawn dim light.

As it got brighter, and we moved around the ranch a bit, we started seeing deer moving, and looking through binoculars we could spot antlers on some of them. Antlers aren't a big deal as far as I'm concerned. When I hunt deer I'm looking for venison in the freezer. Still, things being what they are, it's hard to not look at antlers.

So, we were spotting deer, but nothing in range. We looked at a nice buck standing and looking at us from around 450 yards—out of my shooting range. I spotted a small buck moving through a line of brush, but it disappeared while I had to answer a call of nature. Every once in a while, John would laugh and ask, "Was that December 10?"

I responded, "No, November 10—but maybe it was Central Time."

In early afternoon we were driving up a hillside where deer often hide out during the day. I saw something in the bottom of a draw. "Stop the car," I said, putting up my binoculars to confirm that the something was a deer with antlers. I stepped out of the truck, found a rest and made a hurried shot, and the hunt was over. The work was just beginning.

The deer had a perfect spot, in warm sunshine, out of the wind. Why it hadn't bolted for safety when we came along is a good question. There's a Native American belief that the animal we're supposed to harvest will offer him or herself to you, and looking back over many years of hunting, this has been a common thread, in fact probably the only rational reason, for many successful big game hunts.

This year's Montana general big game season ended at sundown on Sunday, November 26. My season ended on November 10 at 1:30 in the afternoon. Whether we credit Solunar tables or magazine predictions, we again have prime venison in the freezer, for which we give thanks.

A new low in politics

By Robin Jordan

For weeks we've been following the strange tale of Roy Moore, the Republican candidate for Senate running in the Alabama special election.

Almost a month ago, a woman came forward with allegations that Moore had sexually assaulted her when she was only 14 years old and he was 30. Other allegations followed quickly as multiple women came forward with their own stories, strikingly similar, of Moore's inappropriate sexual advances toward them when they were only in their teens.

Moore called the accusations false and questioned why these women were coming forward, some 40 years after the incidents, and said their claims were politically motivated.

Moore is no stranger to controversy. He's best known for being twice elected and twice removed from the Alabama Supreme Court for failing to uphold the United States Constitution. His anti-homosexual and anti-Muslim views have attracted national attention, along with past ties to white supremacist groups. He was a leading voice in the birther movement against President Obama. He's been a colorful figure in Alabama politics, known for wearing a cowboy hat and vest and riding his horse to the polls.

While many high-ranking members of the Republican Party have called on Moore to drop out of the Senate race, he is not only still running, but according to the polls, is in a tight race with Democratic candidate Doug Jones.

Really? Are the voters of Alabama willing to vote for a man accused of sexually assaulting an underage girl rather than elect a Democrat to the Senate?

The women accusing Moore have nothing to gain from coming forward now. Why would they publically relive what had to be some of the most painful and embarrassing moments of their lives? The stories are so similar and show such an alarming pattern in Moore's behavior that they have more than the ring of truth.

Moore is certainly not the only politician who's used his age and position to sexually harass women. Every day, we hear more accusations, mostly believable, against politicians, men in the entertainment industry and even trusted news anchors. As reprehensible as it is, sexual harassment is alive and well in our culture. Somehow, though, when underage children are involved, we as a nation have to draw the line.

It's alarming to see that there are those in this country to whom loyalty to a political party is more important than the character of the candidate. Have we really sunk this low?

We as a nation need to demand more from our political representatives. Politics should attract the best and the brightest, not just those with the most money or the best connections. It's a sad state of affairs when a smarmy character like Moore is the best a political party can do. The voters of Alabama should demand better.

The Deadly Ideology of Neoliberalism

By George Waring

Last week's column of Thanksgiving for Noam Chomsky concluded by focusing on what he sees as "the crucial principle" of our neoliberal era, what we've been enduring since 1979. Chomsky defined the crucial principle of neoliberalism as being the undermining of our society's "mechanisms of social solidarity and mutual support and popular engagement in determining policy." This weakening of social solidarity in local labor halls and neighborhood/community political organizations, cooperative enterprises, etc., by the Neoliberals was advanced in part by their redefinition of "freedom."

Think of how the word freedom was used during World War II by Franklin D. Roosevelt. Think of the "Four Freedoms"

Chomsky noted that redefining freedom was so successful that today neoliberal ideology gives us a "freedom" that "means a subordination to the decisions of concentrated, unaccountable, private power." We see this in unorganized workers toiling for huge, multinational corporations, corporations enjoying the freedom to transfer their business address to the Cayman Islands to escape taxation. Corporations free to destroy democracy through disguised and unlimited campaign spending.

Chomsky cites Margaret Thatcher's belief, at the heart of neoliberalism, "there is no society, only individuals." There is no organism to which we belong, it's Ayn Rand's war of all against all. Nothing binds us except phony emotions aroused within us by corporate propagandists.

Referring to the two great threats to human existence, nuclear war and global climate change, Chomsky presents his basic belief: The one barrier to these threats of destruction "is an engaged public, an informed, engaged public acting together to develop means to confront the threats and respond to them." But civic engagement has been systematically and consciously weakened, since 1979.

Chomsky cites two documents that became the foundation for the triumph of Neoliberalism. These ideological manifestos were our oligarchy's reaction to the public activism of the 1960s, college opposition to the Vietnam War, and to demands that our political system be democratized and made responsive to demands of newly mobilized minorities, young people, the elderly, workers, and women. The elite considered the people as "special interests," and, as Chomsky noted, "their task is to just watch quietly. And that was explicit."

The two documents appeared in the mid-'70s. The first was published by the Trilateral Commission, which Chomsky describes as "liberal internationalists, three major industrial countries, basically the Carter administration." This was The Crisis of Democracy, a Trilateral Commission report by Harvard's Samuel Huntington. Chomsky says that Huntington "looked back with nostalgia to the days when Truman was able to run the country with the cooperation of a few Wall Street lawyers and executives. Then everything was fine. However, in the 1960s "the special interests started trying to get into the act, and that was causing too much pressure and the state couldn't handle that."

Huntington spoke for "the liberal internationalists, their consensus view that a major problem was the institutions responsible for the indoctrination of the young, the schools, the universities, churches, were not doing their job. Not indoctrinating the young properly. The young had to be returned to passivity and obedience, and then democracy would be fine. That was view from the left elite."

From the right end of the elite came the Powell Memorandum, written by Lewis Powell, a tobacco lobbyist and corporate lawyer, who Reagan put on the Supreme Court. Powell's confidential memorandum was written for the US Chamber of Commerce. Chomsky says, "It more or less set off the modern so-called conservative movement. According to Powell, "the rampaging left had taken over everything." Therefore, corporate America had to use its resources to beat back this rampaging New Left which was undermining freedom and democracy.

Chomsky says, "There was a lot of elite discussion across the spectrum about the danger of too much democracy and the need to have what was called more "moderation" in democracy, for people to become more passive and apathetic and not to disturb things too much, and that's what the neoliberal programs do."

"As a result of the 1960's activism and labor militancy, there was a falling rate of profit. To reverse that, democratic participation had to be undermined. Neoliberalism had exactly those effects."

"Put it all together and what do you have? A perfect storm."

For Chomsky, "neoliberal socioeconomic policies that lead to stagnation or decline for the majority of the population, undermine democracy, remove decision-making out of popular hands, result in anger, discontent, and fear. . . . And that's the phenomenon that's misleadingly called "populism."

What's Cooking

Jerky

By Debbie Sorensen

Over the years I've tried a number of recipes for jerky. Some were marginal and others were a waste of time, resources and good humor. I just didn't find a finished product that I was satisfied with making at home. I got the silly idea that if I changed the shape of what I was working with, perhaps that would improve the flavor.

I bought a cute little press thing that was touted to work great for mashing burger into uniform shapes for drying in an electric dehydrator. I pressed and scraped or piled and rolled until I was becoming the #1 crab of the whole dog-gone jerky detail! The last years our boys were home and hunting, I was happy to put all of the ground meat into burger wrap and quit crabbing.

Linda Korhonen from Minnesota encouraged me to try making jerky again, with this favorite recipe. Her husband and his 87 year old, Uncle got a nice Whitetail buck in northern Minnesota for their yearly jerky supply. Our son, his six-year old son and father-in-law, brought in a nice Whitetail buck in southwest Montana. We anticipate some good jerky from that venison.

Venison Jerky

3 lbs. lean venison, sliced thin. (If meat is partially frozen it will slice easier.)
1 T. salt
1/2 tsp. black pepper
1/3 c. soy sauce
1 tsp. liquid smoke (or to taste)

1 tsp. garlic powder
1/3 c. Worcestershire sauce
2 T. prepared mustard

Marinate meat for 3 days in the refrigerator, turning occasionally.

Wipe excess marinade off of meat, if needed.

Drying procedure.

If using food dehydrator, follow manufacture directions for temperature and time.

If using gas oven:

-Lay meat on wire racks in oven with pilot light on. Drying time: about 24 hours.

If using electric oven:

-Lay meat on wire racks in oven, with the temperature set on the lowest setting and with the door propped open. Drying time: about 24 hours.

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

Debbie McLarnon

Can You Afford to Retire Early?

Some people dream of retiring early. Are you one of them? If so, you'll need to plan ahead – because a successful early retirement can't be achieved through last-minute moves.

So, if you're determined to retire early, consider taking the following steps:

Pick a date. Early retirement means different things to different people. But it's important to pick an exact age, whether it is 60, 62, 64, or whatever, so you can build an appropriate retirement income strategy.

Think about your retirement lifestyle. You may know that you want to retire early – but have you thought about what you want to do with your newfound time? Will you simply stay close to home and pursue your hobbies? Do you dream of spending two months each winter on a tropical island? Or are you thinking of opening your own small business or doing some consulting? Different retirement lifestyles can have vastly different price tags. Once you've envisioned your future, you can develop a saving and investment plan to help you get there.

Boost contributions to your retirement plans. If you want to retire early, you may well need to accelerate your contributions to your retirement accounts, such as your IRA and your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored plan. You may need to cut back in other areas of your life to maximize the amounts you put into your retirement plans, but this sacrifice may be worth it to you.

Invest for growth. Your investment strategy essentially should be based on three key factors: your goals, risk tolerance and time horizon. When you change any one of these variables, it will affect the others. So, if you shorten your time horizon by retiring early, you may well need to reconsider your risk tolerance. Specifically, you may need to accept a somewhat higher level of investment risk so you can invest for greater growth potential.

Keep a lid on your debt load. It's easier said than done, but try to manage your debt load as tightly as possible. The lower your monthly debt payments, the more you can contribute to your retirement plans.

Life is unpredictable. Even if you take all the steps described above, you may still fall short of your goal of retiring early. While this may be somewhat disappointing, you might find that adding just a few more years of work can be beneficial to building resources for your chosen retirement lifestyle. For one thing, you can continue contributing to your IRA and your 401(k) or similar employer-sponsored plan.

Plus, if you're still working, you may be able to afford delaying your Social Security payments until you're closer to your "normal" retirement age, which, as defined by the Social Security Administration, likely will be 66 or 67. The longer you put off taking these benefits, the bigger your monthly checks, although they will max out once you reach 70.

And even if you are not able to retire early, some of the moves you took to reach that goal – such as contributing as much as you could afford to your IRA and 401(k), controlling your debts, and so on – may pay off for you during your retirement – whenever it begins.

A healthy diet will also assist in winter. We may all be craving high carbohydrate, high calorie foods this time of year. Include healthy carbs in moderation and as your calorie budget allows. Snacking on fruits and vegetables and including them as many of your meals as possible will have maximum mood boosting effects. As a bonus, you'll feel better and weigh less.

If you do start to feel down, reach out to your social circle. Make a phone call and have a long conversation with a friend. Meet for coffee or a walk or exercise session. Invite friends or family over for an evening or a meal. All of these social activities help us forget ourselves and leave us relaxed and better-off.

Consider taking up a new hobby or revisiting one you have enjoyed in the past. This provides a new focus and takes attention from any sadness we may be having. It helps our brains and our moods when we learn new skills, reacquaint ourselves with old ones and feel the satisfaction of accomplishing something.

Staying warm is also important. Try hot drinks and hot food and warm clothing and shoes to stay warm. Moving around periodically keeps our circulation working and warms us up. Setting the thermostat between 64 and 70 degrees has been shown to be the best for both mood and health. When we are cold, it leads to depression. Staying warm reduces the winter blues by half.

You have the option of purchasing a 'light box' which produces a very bright light and has been proven to help with Seasonal Affective Disorder. If you are considering something of this nature, it is worth a conversation with your Primary Care Provider to make sure you are doing all you can on your own as well. Your Provider may also want to discuss counseling or other solutions with you.

If you are pro-active and exercise, eat healthy, stay warm and expose yourself to sun or light, you may not even notice the shorter days. Socialize and enjoy winter activities. It's a great time of year

Avoid the Winter Blues

Living in a Northern climate makes us all susceptible to feeling sad during the winter months when the daylight hours are short and the darkness of night is long. Most importantly, if your winter blues are severe and are interfering with your ability to function or enjoy your life, it is time to seek professional help. You can talk to your Primary Care Provider or a professional counselor. For the rest of us who suffer, but more mildly, we'll discuss some strategies that may help.

You will not be surprised to hear that staying active is very importance to our moods. There is solid research to indicate that exercise prevents and treats depression. With so many hours of darkness this becomes even more important. Either stick to your normal exercise routine or create a new one. If your schedule and fitness level allows, take an hour-long walk in the middle of the day.

It also helps to open your blinds and let sunlight pour into your abode as often as possible. Christmas lights are great and it is easy to see why they are such a tradition! When you are ready to take holiday decorations down, consider leaving a few lights up to keep the mood festive, or replace them with other twinkling lights of your choosing for that extra light and sparkle till the natural light becomes more

Diabetes Tidbit

Myth - Carbohydrates are bad if you have Diabetes
Carbohydrates are not bad. Our brain needs Carbs to function. However, it is important to monitor our portion sizes and what types of carbs we chose. We should focus on fruits, vegetables, and whole grains. It is important to know if you have diabetes, you can have a cookie. You can have a piece of cake. It comes down to portion control. Woman should keep their carb budget at 45-60 grams per meal and men should keep their carb budget at 60-75 grams per meal. This is true for all people with or without diabetes.

Diabetes Tidbit

People often times feel what they ate at dinner or bedtime has a direct impact on their blood sugar in the morning. This is not true. The fasting morning BG is controlled mostly by the overnight insulin level. You are probably not making enough insulin at night. This causes sugar to be released by the liver. The "Leaky Liver" puts more sugar in your blood and raises your blood sugar. This is frustrating because you may go to bed with a normal blood sugar, (80-140) and wake up higher and you did not eat all night. Please remember, there is more to diabetes than food.

Carousel Corner

Larry Hoffman

Last week Montana Tech mining engineering students David Otto and Nick Warman took time from their diligent studying to be the muscle on the forks of Markovich Construction's extending forklift and put the ventilating fan back up under our cupola, some 35 feet off the floor. It was taken down last spring to track down leaks and fix a vibration problem.

Petriz Urethane finished most of the ceiling insulation, which will make a big difference in out heating bill. It also used up most of the bales of insulation stored inside, really opening up the interior space. There are still a lot of materials stacked, but now it's easier to envision what will be.

The interior continues to blossom with color as trim is installed and painted. Entire walls are covered in vibrant colors, thanks to many volunteer painters. All of the interior doors are hung and mostly painted. The Giving Tree, filling one wall of the west end, is filling out. When completed it will be covered with gold, silver, and copper leaves for each of the donors to the project these many years. There will be a lot of leaves!

After many years of being in storage in Dave Johns' garage and then buried in the back of the painted horse stable in the Butte Plaza Mall, the wooden sweeps and braces that form the diameter of the carousel itself, and the steel rods that support them, were taken to the site. They need to be cleaned of storage dust and some parts painted, but the assembly process should start in the next few days. This is not the original Columbia Gardens merry-go-round, which burned, but a very similar 1950's travelling carnival version. In it's day going from town to town, they say the roustabout crew could set it up in less than two hours.

This week should see some big changes inside our Carousel building, in addition to the growth of the mechanism. The most significant will be the installation of the plumbing fixtures by JS Plumbing, allowing the long hoped-for retirement of the porta-potty! Nicholls Sheet Metal will also work on completing the heat ducting and final furnace details, and the paint crew will continue to bring color to the long-drab construction-phase interior.

Make plans and reservations to come to our Second Annual Carousel Gala, Saturday, January 27, at the Quality Inn (former War Bonnet). It was a grand time last year and promises to be even better this time. Michele Brennick at 494-8207 is the lady with the tickets.

This Week In Labor History November 22th - December 4th

"The risks are given to the unsuspecting consumer and the poor work force. . . . The benefits are only for the Corporations, for the money makers."
- Cesar Chavez, legendary Labor leader, UFW co-founder, Social Justice Activist

Wednesday, Nov 29:

Dorothy Day (Servant of God), social justice activist, proud IWW member, devout Catholic, ex-communist dies. She established the Catholic Worker Movement, a pacifist movement that continues to combine direct aid for the poor and homeless with non-violent direct action on their behalf. (Pope Francis mentioned Dorothy Day 3 separate times during his historic 2015 speech to Congress) -1980

Southern California, faculty at Claremont Colleges attempts Union recognition while working with organizers for the I.W.W. (Industrial Workers of the World), fondly known as the "Wobblies" or "Wobs." -2000

Thursday, Nov 30:

Mother Jones died age 100; "I'm not a lady, I'm a hell-raiser!" A founder of the IWW, organizer for the Knights of Labor and the United Mine Workers. Her rallying cry was famous: "Pray for the dead and fight like hell for the living." A century ago, Mother Jones was a celebrated organizer and agitator, the very soul of the modern American labor movement. At coal strikes, steel strikes, railroad, textile, and brewery strikes, Mother Jones was always there, stirring the workers to action and enraging the powerful. Famous for her bravado, when she and 3,000 women were released from jail after being held all night they marched straight to the hotel housing the militia and ate the breakfast set out for the soldiers. -1930

Union members and activists, protesting corporate greed, shut down World Trade Organization meeting, Seattle, Washington. -1999

Friday, Dec 1:

Butte Montana: Rustling card system put in place by the Anaconda Mining and Smelter Company. "Agitators" identified by company spies are refused cards and work. The system was seen as un-American and undemocratic by the workers and marked the end of the closed shop in Butte. Cards were denied to anyone who complained about unsafe conditions, wages or the cards themselves and had tangible chilling effect on all workers. -1912

The Youngstown General Duty Nurses Association (YGDNA) became the first nurses in Ohio to engage in a mass resignation or "strike."

According to the American Nurses Association, it may have been the first concerted action by nurses in a labor dispute in the nation. -1966

Saturday, Dec 2:

The Oakland General Strike is called for today by the AFL. AFL workers from 142 Unions around Oakland walk off their jobs, bus drivers, teamsters, sailors, machinists, cannery workers, railroad porters, waiters, waitresses, cooks. For over 2 days, Oakland is shut down. Over 100,000 participated in the strike. During 1946 4.5 million workers struck, the greatest number in American history. The Corporate interest retaliated by passing Taft-Hartley Act of 1947, which even today continues to undermine America's labor movement. -1946

The U.S. Senate votes to condemn Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R-Wisc.) for bringing "the Senate into dishonor and disrepute." McCarthy was a glory seeking opportunist who destroyed lives by falsely accusing thousands of Americans, almost exclusively supporters of Unions, Civil Rights and progressive causes, of being Communists traitors. (In 2014 Sen. Daines (R-MT) used blatant "McCarthyism" throughout his Senate campaign falsely accusing his opponent of being a "Communist".) -1954

Sunday, Dec 3:

US Supreme Court jails Samuel Gompers and other Union organizers for violating an injunction against Buck's Stove & Range Co. Gompers' famously said, "Show me the country that has no strikes and I'll show you the country in which there is no liberty." -1906

Arrests began today in Middleton, N.J., of Union teachers striking in violation of a no-strike law. 228 educators were jailed for 7 days before they were released following the Education Association's agreement to take the dispute to mediation. -2001

Monday, Dec 4:

Labor leader Cesar Chavez is jailed for 20 days for refusing to end United Farm Workers' grape boycott. -1970

The U.S. Department of Labor reports employers slashed 533,000 jobs the month before, the most in 34 years, as Bush's Great Recession surged. The unemployment rolls had risen for 7 months before and continued to soar for another 10 months. -2008

Tuesday, Dec 5:

A Wildcat Strike occurred at the Dodge truck plant in Detroit, Michigan, one of many "illegal" wartime strikes waged by the underpaid and exploited workforce. -1944

Ending a 20-year split, the two largest labor federations in the U.S. merge to form the AFL-CIO, with a membership estimated at 15 million. -1955

Flu Season

St. James Healthcare Shares Tips for Staying Healthy

According to the Montana Department of Public Health and Human Services, nearly 50 cases of Influenza have been diagnosed in our state, with the number predicted to climb rapidly. Last year, 7,935 total cases were confirmed, requiring more than 800 hospitalizations. Over 50 deaths were directly attributed to the disease.

At St. James Healthcare, physicians and other healthcare providers are bracing for flu season. Kris Doherty, RN, Infection Prevention at St. James Healthcare, notes that they have already placed signs reminding hospital visitors to wash hands often, cover coughs, and wear masks to prevent the influenza from spreading.

"Because having a friend or family member visit can boost the spirits of someone who is hospitalized, we are not imposing visitor restrictions during this cold and flu season," says Doherty. "We are instead emphasizing the importance of having visitors wash or sanitize their hands before entering and after leaving the patient room. The patient, especially young children and the elderly, may have a compromised immune system due to their illness or following a surgical procedure, so by taking a few extra minutes to wash their hands or use the hand sanitizers located throughout the hospital, visitors can reduce the spread of influenza to those they're visiting."

The same precautions taken within St. James Healthcare can be used at home to keep families healthy. Washing hands with soap and water, covering your mouth and nose when coughing and avoiding touching your eyes, nose or mouth can all reduce the spread of the influenza virus. If you do have the flu staying home from work or school will not only help prevent you from spreading the virus to others, but also help you recover better.

One of the best ways to reduce the spread of flu is to get an annual vaccination. The side effects of these vaccines are minimal, but they have been proven to be effective in reducing the likelihood of contracting or transmitting the virus.

Symptoms of influenza include coughing, fatigue, headaches, high fevers, muscle and joint pain, a stuffy or runny nose, sneezing, and nausea. While these symptoms often resolve over time with rest, hydration and over the counter medications, Doherty notes you should contact your primary care provider immediately if you or your child has difficulty breathing, indications of dehydration, changes in skin color, severe or persistent vomiting or a high fever.

St. James Healthcare Receives National Recognition for Performance Leadership

St. James Healthcare announced it has been recognized by The Chartis Center for Rural Health/iVantage Health Analytics and the National Organization of State Office of Rural Health (NOSORH) for overall excellence in patient outcomes reflecting top quartile performance among all rural hospitals in the nation.

"We are very pleased with this award because our staff has worked diligently over the past several years to ensure the "best patient experience" for each and every patient. Receiving this award along with being named one of the 2017 Top 20 Rural Hospitals in the country is an independent acknowledgement of our success in providing quality care," said Jay Doyle, President of St. James Healthcare.

The rankings are determined each year using iVantage Health Analytics' Hospital Strength INDEX®, the industry's most comprehensive and objective assessment of rural hospital performance. In partnership with NOSORH, iVantage Health Analytics has developed a data-driven program designed to identify excellence across a broad spectrum of indicators relevant to hospital performance and patient care. The Hospital Strength INDEX captures performance metrics for all rural and Critical Access Hospitals. More than 50 individual metrics are aggregated into three major categories and eight pillars to derive a single strength overall rating for each facility.

"It's great to recognize these top performers who are excelling in managing risk, achieving higher quality, securing better outcomes, increasing patient satisfaction, or operating at a lower cost than their peers," said Michael Topchik, National Leader of the Chartis Center for Rural Health. "These leaders serve as a benchmark for other rural facilities as they strive to achieve similar results and provide a blueprint for how to successfully run a hospital and serve their communities amidst today's uncertainty and mounting pressures."

FWP holds meetings in Helena and Townsend to review Local Boater Program

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks is holding two public meetings to review the 2017 Local Boater Program and discuss the plans for the program in 2018.

“We want to give people an opportunity to provide us with feedback on the program and hear what we have planned for the coming year,” said FWP’s aquatic invasive species bureau chief Tom Woolf.

The meetings are set for Nov. 28 in Helena at Montana WILD from 6 – 8 p.m., and in Townsend on Dec. 5 at the Community School Room from 6 – 8 p.m. The intent of these meetings are for information sharing and gathering and requesting feedback on the program. No 2018 stickers will be available.

The Local Boater Program was established on Tiber and Canyon Ferry Reservoirs after suspect detections of invasive mussel larvae at Canyon Ferry and positive larvae samples from Tiber. Each reservoir had their own program, which required participants to go through some training on aquatic invasive species and clean, drain, dry techniques. Each participant signed an affidavit pledging to have their watercraft decontaminate should they use it anywhere other than Tiber or Canyon Ferry.

The program allowed participants to avoid the need for decontamination if their next boating trip was on the same waterbody. The purpose of the program was to decrease the volume of boats at the decontamination stations and allow FWP to focus on boats traveling elsewhere.

For more information on the meeting, contact Beth Giddings at 444-7815.
